Ford cleared of funds misuse

Associated Press Writer

President Ford won a clean bill of health today from the Watergate special prosecutor in a probe of allegations that Ford had misued political campaign funds while a member of Conress.

"The matter has now been closed and counsel for the President has been so advised," special prosecutor Charles Ruff said in a two-page statement handed out to reporters.

The White House announced that Ford will hold a news conference at 7:30 p.m. EDT today to discuss the special prosecutor's inquiry and answer quesions on other subjects. It will be the President's first formal news conference since Feb. 17.

Word that Ford had been cleared of the charges came about the same time that Ford was rolling up his sleeve at the White House to receive a swine flu shot administered by his personal physician, Dr. William Lukash.

The President's inoculation attracted special attention in view of reports that more than a score of elderly persons have died after being given the shots. Federal officials at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., say there is no evidence to link the deaths with the vaccinations, but several states have suspended their inoculation programs, at least temporarily.

Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter, meanwhile, was flying to New York to begin another three-day stint of campaigning that will take him to Detroit, Kansas City and several cities in Ohio.

Ford himself ended a two-day campaign visit to the New York-New Jersey area Wednesday, and the vice-presidential candidates, Democrat Walter F. Mondale and Republican Bob Dole, were heading for Houston, Tex., where they will meet in a nationally televised debate on Friday night.

The announcement by Ruff that Ford had been cleared of all suspicion in connection with the misuse of campaign funds was certain to provide a lift to the President's effort to win the Nov. 2 election.

But there remained another potentially troublesome inquiry, also by Ruff's office, into claims that Ford, while House minority leader, may have discussed with members of President Richard M. Nixon's White House staff ways of blocking an early investigation into the Watergate affair.

And the Washington Post reported that the Democratic National Committee plans to file a complaint with the Federal Election Commission about Ford's alleged use of aides and Cabinet members, who earn government salaries, for campaign duties.

Ruff's statement said the investigation of Ford's campaign funds originated with charges by an individual, whom Ruff did not identify, that political contributions from certain unnamed unions had been transmitted to political committees in Kent County, Michigan, Ford's home district, with the understanding that they would be passed on to Ford for his personal use.

Ruff said the individual took the charges to an FBI agent. Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi was notified by FBI Director Clarence Kelley on July 13, and ordered the case given to the special prosecutor for investigation.

Ford, at each stop on Wednesday, told his audiences that Carter wants to raise their taxes but that a Ford administration will cut taxes. At White Plains, N.Y., Ford said, "I say the middle-income taxpayer is already overtaxed, overburdened and underrepresented."

And he signed a bill extending the federal revenue-sharing program for 3½ years at a projected cost of $25.5 billion. The money goes to state and local governments.

In a statement issued in Plains, Carter said, "I am pleased that Mr. Ford has decided to sign the bill." But, he said, "I do regret that so little else has been done by this administration to ease the plight of our cities and to help restore a true federalism in our system of government."

He said Ford had vetoed legislation that would have provided needed aid to cities and states.

Meanwhile, the Ford administration announced an increase in the production loan rates for wheat and feed grains after months of rejecting farmers' pleas for such increases.

There were indications the move could aid the Ford campaign in grain-growing states where the race with Carter is close, but Agriculture Department officials denied any political motivation.

Pemiscot sheriff is ousted

CARUTHERSVILLE

"We're tired of being the cesspool of the Bootheel in the area of law enforcement," said Pemiscot County Presiding Judge D. J. Meredith, following the ouster Wednesday of former sheriff Thad O. Shelly.

"We are sick to death of our type of law enforcement in Pemiscot County," Meredith said. "We are going to do everything we can to improve it."

Charles Albert Farris, was appointed as interim sheriff until Dec. 31, when the winner of the Nov. 2, general election is to take office.

Farris, former sheriff Clyde Orton and County Treasurer John Turnage have all indicated intensions to wage a write-in campaign for the post.

Shelly was appointed to the office after Orton was ousted in 1971 for allowing widespread gambling and liquor violations in the county.

On Friday, Circuit Judge William Ragland reportedly entered an order vacating the sheriff's office for Shelly's failure to post a $50,000 bond, first ordered Sept. 3. At the same time the judge stayed the execution of the order until 4 p.m. Tuesday to allow the sheriff time to apply to the Missouri Court of Appeals for a writ of prohibition. The judge's order stated that if no writ was granted, the county court was ordered to appoint a new sheriff

Motorist plunges into river

A Steele man was killed Wednesday in an accident at the Cottonwood Point ferry landing in Pemiscot County and nine persons were injured in six separate accidents on area roads, the highway patrol reported today.

The patrol said the accident at the ferry landing has not yet been ruled a traffic accident.

The patrol said the accident occurred at 10:45 p.m. when Elmer E. Biggs, 60, of Steele, traveling east in a pickup truck, ran off the ferry landing into 30 feet of water. The body and vehicle were recovered about two hours later by the Blytheville, Ark. Citizens Band and Rescue Squad. The body was taken to Pemiscot County Medical Center at Hayti and then moved to German-Aumon Funeral Home in Steele.

A one-vehicle accident at 5:30 p.m., six miles east of Fredericktown on a county road, caused serious injuries to the driver and his brother.

The accident occurred when Richard Allen Cathey, 18, of Patton, lost control of his eastbound car on loose gravel. The car ran off the road and struck a tree. Cathey and his brother, Robert H. Cathey, 17, were taken to Madison County Hospital in Fredericktown with serious injuries.

Two persons were injured -- one seriously-- in a collision at 6:45 p.m., three miles north of Senath on Highway 25.

The patrol said a southbound pickup truck with a cotton trailer, driven by Winfred Harold Tackeberry, 46, of Kennett, attempted to make a left turn and pulled into the path of a car driven north by Jimmy Allen Winkle, 21, of Senath.

Bond tells teachers

Amendment 2 would severely hurt schools

Gov. Christopher S. Bond told members of the Sikeston Community Teachers Association that the passage of Amendment Two in the Nov. 2 general election would deal a heavy blow to state finances and that one of the biggest losers would be education.

Bond spoke to teachers from Sikeston and other schools at the Sikeston High School cafetorium shortly before appearing at a Republican Party barbecue attended by an estimated 1,000 people. The barbecue was held at the National Guard Armory.

Bond told the teachers that passage of the amendment, which would eliminate sales taxes from food and prescription drugs, would cost the state $140 million and local governments $40 million — money that would have to be recovered through a broad range of new taxes.

The amendment is being billed as a tax reform measure. Bond said one state official, he did not identify him, says passage of the amendment would provoke the kind of crisis needed to obtain tax reform in the state.

Bond said his answer is that the state does not need government by crisis.

If tax reform is needed, Bond said it should not be done in a system struggling to survive.

The big losers, if the bill should pass, would be education, mental health and other social programs, Bond said. He told the teachers state funds are legally committed to other areas and funding in the education and social areas are the only ones that can be cut.

The state financial assistance program could not stand that kind of shock, Bond said.

The $18 million would have to be recovered through a broad range of taxes, Bond said, adding that he does not know just which the Legislature would accept.

Taking a swipe at his Democratic opponent, Joseph Teasdale, without mentioning his name, Bond said the state could not make up the loss by taxing business without driving businesses and jobs out of the state. Teasdale has said he would make up the loss by raising business taxes.

He said some states have learned that their high tax rates have cost them jobs. Other states are cutting their taxes and trying to lure business back, he said.

Bond later told the crowd at the barbecue that Teasdale's only promise so far has been to raise taxes, something he called a "strange concept" in campaigning.

Bond told the teachers that he looks forward with hope and optimism to five areas of education, including early childhood and parent education, compentancy examinations, vocational education, consumer economics education and revision of the state funds formula.

Bond said there is a need to work with parents to help develop the potential of children before they attend school. He pointed to studies showing that the child learns most quickly in his very early years, before he attends school.

He added that high school may be the place to train young people in parenthood, and

Stoddard deputy to join Dexter police department

BLOOMFIELD — The Stoddard County Sheriff's Department is losing a deputy to the troubled Dexter Police Department, a spokesman for the sheriff's department announced today.

Deputy Steve Fish who has been with the department for about a year and a half will be leaving his position with the county Friday.

Bernie police officer Larry Hampton has resigned his position to take the one being vacated by Fish.

The spokesman said there is no problem within the sheriff's department or within the Bernie police department and that the shuffling of personnel among the different police agencies in the county were due to personal reasons of each officer.

Fish could not be reached for comment this morning.

This will not be the first time personnel has shifted from one police department in the county to another. Present Dexter Police Chief Jim Teeters was a Stoddard County deputy before accepting the job in Dexter.

Bob Barker now a deputy sheriff in Stoddard County worked for awhile with the Dexter Police Department before quitting to join the sheriff's department.

Barker, along with Deputy Jim Ross, are two deputies named specifically by members or former members of the Dexter police as the ones they were ordered to stay away from by a superior.

Dexter has recently had a problem keeping police officers with three resigning during the past several weeks due to internal problems. Two other officers have been suspended.

DEATH OF A CHILEAN

Someone murdered Orlando Otelier — brutally, by a bomb attached to his car — while he was driving to work in Washington, D.C.

Mr. Otelier was a person of some political prominence. A one time Chilean ambassador to the United States, he was later minister of defense under the Marxist regime of Salvador Allende. Since Allende was overthrown in 1973, Otelier has been a bitter opponent of the present military junta which rules Chile. So it was immediately assumed, apparently by just about everyone, that it was the junta which ordered and engineered Otelier's murder. And it has sparked a great hue and cry among those opposed to the junta, blaming it for the atrocity and calling for the U.S. to cease all support for such an allegedly murderous government.The whole Left, in fact, has seized upon the crime as a cause celebre.

Which certainly makes us wonder a bit who it really was who killed Mr. Otelier. Keep in mind that so far there is no proof of any kind that the Chilean Government was responsible. That is supposed to be taken as so obvious that no proof is necessary. Why then, we ask, would the junta be so stupid as to invite such condemnation? Couldn't Chile's rulers have figured out for themselves that blowing Otelier up with a bomb would not exactly improve their image in the U.S.?

Otelier's "friends" might figure it that way. Perhaps they did him in themselves. After all, what is the sacrifice of one man if his death can contribute to the cause he himself believed in?

We're not claiming that is necessarily the answer in this case; but if so, it would not be the first political crime committed by one faction in order to put the blame on the other. Politics can sometimes be an extremely cynical business.

All we are saying is that until the evidence is in, and the guilty party cleared established, we think that fair-minded Americans ought to withhold judgment.

BLUE RIBBON STUDY OF MEDICAID
From The Raleigh, N.C. News And Observer

It turns out that Senator Frank E. Moss, of Utah, achieved mixed results from his unusual efforts to pinpoint waste and abuse in the nation's 15-billion-dollar-a-year medicaid program of health care for the poor. The happiest outcome of his project would be a more thorough and dispassionate study, something on the order of a presidential blue ribbon inquiry, to look beyond Moss's findings.

Staff investigators of Moss's Senate Committee on Aging uncovered dramatic examples of unnecessary treatment and fraudulent billing in many of the 600 storefront clinics known as "medicaid mills" in New York City.

Behind these sensational abuses, however, is a prevailing pattern of mediocre health care that is the best available to the hundreds of thousands who are the pawns of the medicaid mills. And the mills themselves are not uniformly run to gouge the government. Three of Moss's staff investigators, dressed in shabby attire and armed with fake medicaid eligibility cards, were arrested at clinics in Detroit—and would have been charged with fraud themselves under normal circumstances.

Those who are most anxious to reform the Medicaid program have no difficulty highlighting examples of outrageous waste and abuse. It is harder to identify the degree of legitimate, if not always high quality, care rendered to people who genuinely need it and are entitled to it under the law. The sensational aspects of this sometimes seedy and oftentimes sad business can best be used to improve the program instead of merely damning it.

The basic question posed is one of separating exploitation of the poor and the Government from medicaid services. The traditional fee-for-service delivery method, with different parties getting the service and paying the fee, is at the heart of the matter. And that isn't going to be rendered ethical or modified at many of the medicaid mills until a more thorough and dispassionate review of the program has been made.

IT SEEMS INCREDIBLE

The landslide victory of Gov. Carter for the Democratic nomination for President of the United States seems incredible. Sometimes people who have been familiar with politics wonder if they are dreaming, and if it did really happen in the America of today.

Carter was born and raised on a farm near Plains, Georgia, a town approximately the size of Madison in Monroe County. His family was not wealthy, but it was a prosperous one as farming goes. He applied for and won appointment to the U.S. Navl Academy, then served several years as a naval officer. He returned to his home village and took over the management of the Carter farm and its peanut warehouse after the death of his father. He tried for public office and failed the first time. He finally became Governor of Georgia, but had no national fame.

He set his sights on the nomination for President, evolved a brilliant plan for taking his candidacy to the people of the nation, not just to the governors, mayors and political big-wigs.

In the primaries and at the national convention, he won "going away".

Most of us remember that as youths we were told any American boy could become President.

Here, as in the case of Harry Truman, is modern evidence this is still true in America, because Jimmy Carter seems almost certainly destined to be the next President.

It's a modern Alger story of a boy who rose from small beginnings to the supreme heights of American government.

MORE INVASION OF YOUR HOME

Beginning next year, only safety glass may be used in Missouri in entrance and exit doors, sliding doors and glass panels, shower doors and bathtub enclosures.

The idea may be good, since it is designed to reduce injuries sustained when people, especially children, run into glass panels and doors, but it does seem to us that we should have the right to at least have our own freedom of choice on the glass we use.

THE PRISON DEAL

The Bond Administration's handling of the aborted real estate deal for a proposed new prison site south of Kansas City may very well be an unfortunate aberration. But for the Republican Administration that has portrayed itself as a paragon of efficiency, it surely must be something of an embarrassment—particular so since it comes in the midst of the Governor's re-election campaign.

What happened, according to a study of the pertinent documents by Louis J. Rose of the Post-Dispatch staff, is that the state agreed to pay $165,000, or 14 per cent, more than two formal appraisals had suggested as the value of the 261-acre site. On top of that, the appraisals were not even made until after the sales contract stipulating a $1,293,000 purchase price had been signed. All of which prompted State Auditor Lehr, a Democrat, to comment that the appraisals, a necessary preliminary to business-like negotiations, appeared to be something of an "afterthought."

Another problem with the deal can be written off as coincidence, we suppose. That is, that the person who handled the negotiations for the state is a former Jackson County Republican Chairman and that one of the beneficiaries, had the deal been consumated, was the husband of a prominent Kansas City Republican. But if the state loses its $75,000 earnest money now that the Governor has abandoned plans to put the prison on the site, then the business judgments involved in the transaction surely were less than acceptable. The Governor killed the $16,000,000 project after widespread local opposition had developed.

Why the state failed to act with greater prudence is a question. But at the very least the deal as it stands is touched with unhappy coincidence, poor judgment and perhaps bureaucratic error. In the absence of evidence of more sinister motivations, these attributes of the affair suggest that the Bond Administration is only human after all.

COST OF CONGRESSIONAL TRAVEL RISES

Congress reported spending $1,349,412 for foreign travel by members during 1975, but a higher total was reported by the Washington Post.

The Post used the Freedom of Information Act to gain access to State Department vouchers relating to travel. The documents showed some $400,000 in expenses not listed by Congress, bringing the 1975 total to $1.7 million.

Congressional Quarterly noted that while the State Department figures are more complete than those reported by Congress, even they do not show the true cost of foreign travel. They do not include a major item—the Air Force transportation provided for many Congressional trips.

EMPLOYMENT IN AMERICA

The surge of governmental employment as a share of the total number of employed workers in this country is again dramatically shown by Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Government at all levels, including the military services, employs about 1 out of every 5 persons in the U.S. In 1960, only 1 in 10 workers was a government employe.

September figures showed a civilian labor force of 95.5 million people out of a total population of 215 million. Of this work force, 72.7 million persons were employed by the private sector of the economy, 17.3 million were employed by government (with 2.1 million in the Armed Forces) and 7.5 million were classified as unemployed.

NOMINATION REACTIONS ARE ENCOURAGING

The reaction of the people of our nation to the candidates for Presidential nomination should be encouraging to all of us, who have lost considerable faith in our government and its officials at Washington.

In both parties, the people of our great nation have responded to the appeal and the hope of new faces, new personalities, new ideas, by giving strong support to candidates who have those attributes.

This is true in the Republican party, where Ronald Reagan has made such a strong showing, whether or not he is eventually nominated.

It is also true in the Democratic party, where Carter has swept the country so overwhelmingly.

As long as our nation and its people are willing and eager to embrace new people such as these with fresh ideas, there is a bright future for us.

WASHINGTON— Everyone is asking what happened to President Ford and how he suddenly lost his momentum. I think I can tell you.

One day last week Mr. Ford's campaign manager walked out to the Rose Garden to discuss some business and found the gate open. He rushed back into the White House and shouted "The President's gone! Who left the Rose Garden gate open?"

None of his aides would admit he had.

"I gave specific orders," the campaign manager said, "that the President was not to be let out of the Rose Garden until after the election."

"He was awful itchy to get out of the garden," an aide said. "I heard him tell Ron Nessen he planned to tunnel out under the fence as soon as Congress went home."

"Oh, my God," the manager said. "He was doing so well in the polls. Our campaign strategy was working perfectly. The only time the press could get near him was when he was signing bills. Now he's going to blow the whole thing."

One of the aides said defensively, "He's running for President of the United States, and he has a right to campaign if he wants to. Besides, it gets cold in the Rose Garden at night."

"I don't care how cold it gets. Look what happened when he ran in the primaries against Ronald Reagan. He was leading by 20 points. Then he started campaigning and hit his head against his helicopter every time he got off the plane. The White Houe is the only safe place for Gerry Ford."

"The President can handle himself," a loyal aide retorted. "He hasn't been in politics for 37 years without knowing what to say."

The campaign manager wasn't convinced. "Does anyone know where he went?"

"I heard him say he was going out to California to debate foreign policy with Jimmy Carter."

"Oh, my God. I told him not to debate with Jimmy Carter. The man gets under Ford's skin and will make Gerry blurt out anything."

"You don't give the President enough credit," an aide retorted. "He's well versed in foreign affairs and has had daily briefings from Henry Kissinger. When it comes to a debate on our policy overseas he'll make mincemeat of Carter."

The campaign manager said, "It's too much of a gamble. The President has everything to lose and nothing to gain by debating Carter. He promised me he'd stay in the Rose Garden. I'd like to find the guy who unlocked the gate."

"Earl Butz was out there last night saying goodby. Maybe he did it."

The campaign manager said, "Well, we've got to get him back. Call Air Force One and demand they immediately return to Washington."

"It's too late. The President's plane has already arrived in San Francisco. The debate is about to start any minute."

"Oh, my God," the campaign manager said as he turned on the set.

For an hour no one said anything. Then Max Frankel of the New York Times asked the question about the Soviet sphere of influence in the Eastern European countries.

The campaign manager put his hands over his eyes. "Here it comes."

Sure enough, the President blew it by saying there was no Soviet domination in East Europe and mentioned Yugoslavia, Romania and Poland as being free countries.

Everyone in the room said "Oh, my God" in unison.

"All right, wise guys," the campaign manager said. "Was I right about opening the gate to the Rose Garden or wasn't I?"

It was a rhetorical question to which nobody bothered to reply.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Adjournment Cans Renegotiation Board

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON— Just as German submarines preferred to strike at dawn or dusk, the special interests have found that the best time to torpedo legislation is during the end-of-the-season rush.

Then the legislators are so impatient to adjourn Congress and head for home that they don't often bother to scrutinize the fine print. The action is also too fast for the public to follow.

Earlier this month, Congress closed down for the 1976 season, and the smoke is now beginning to clear from the adjournment rush. Many of the departing congressmen may be surprised to learn that they left the Federal Renegotiation Board on the shoals.

This agency should be the scourge of the big defense contractors. Potentially, it could recover hundreds of millions in excess profit that the munitions makers had squeezed from the taxpayers.

This has made members of Congress apprehensive about the Renegotiation Board. Every weapons system is supported by a formidable lobby, composed of the military brass who believe in it, the contractors who manufacture the component parts, the workers who put them together and the congressmen whose district enjoy the economic benefits.

The bond between the congressmen and the contractors has been made all the tighter by a steady flow of campaign contributions. Many congressmen, therefore, support the contractors who pick the taxpayers' pockets rather than the agency that guards against the corporate pickpockets.

Democrats and Republicans alike have conspired to limit the powers of the Renegotiation Board. But Sen. William Proxmire, D.-Wis., a foe of Pentagon waste, has sought to strengthen the board. He sponsored a bill that would have made the board a permanent agency and would have given it tough subpoena and inspection powers over contractors.

The Proxmire measure would also have wiped out special loopholes intended to protect the oil industry and would have increased the penalties upon the profiteers.

It was awkward for any member of Congress to oppose these reforms in the open. On the Senate floor, even the oil industry's most staunch friend in the Senate, Russell Long, D.-La., agreed to hold hearings.

Subsequently, the reform measure was skillfully steered through the House by Rep. Joseph Minish, D.-N.J. But Long never got around to scheduling the Senate hearings he had promised.

In desperation, Proxmire sent a private, urgent "Dear Colleague" letter to his fellow senators. It's against the rules of the Senate for one senator to disparage another or to question his motives. So Proxmire, complying with senatorial courtesy, accused Long of welshing in the kindliest language. He noted delicately that Long "had not gotten around" to the bill.

But in firmer tones, Proxmire urged that the bill be taken up in the closing days of Congress. There could be billions of the taxpayers' money at stake, he felt. For a brief time, it appeared that he might marshal enough votes to pass the reforms.

Then Long, exercising his prerogatives as Senate Finance Committee chairman, blocked the bill. Rather than risk letting it pass, he simply permitted the entire board to die as a federal agency.

As of now, the Renegotiation Board continues to function on old cases. But theoretically, it doesn't even exist. It has funds to keep it going into next year. But at least until Congress can reinstitute it in January, all its actions are subject to challenge.

The armaments industry, meanwhile has won another victory over the taxpayers.

GOODBYE HARLEY: In the past, we have written about a powerful but almost anonymous Senate aid named Harley Dirks. From the backrooms of the Senate Appropriations Committee, he controlled the flow of billions to the Health, Education and Welfare Department.

He used his powers to gut a dynamic HEW investigation of Medicaid and Medicare frauds. Disregarding the clear conflict, he also personally handled the budget of an HEW agency in which his wife was an official.

We also reported a few weeks ago that he rigged up a phony record to make it appear that formal hearings had been held on HEW appropriations. The published testimony, it turned out, was merely written answers submitted to the committee.

This proved to be the final straw for patient Sen. Warren Magnuson, D.-Wash., who is Dirks' subcommittee chairman. A few days ago, Magnuson quietly accepted Dirks' resignation. At Dirks' office, a secretary told us he was on vacation and didn't want to talk with us.

WATCH ON WASTE: The General Accounting Office has completed a secret study of the federal flood insurance program, which spends millions to insure communities against flood damage.

In theory, the idea is sound. But our sources say the costly insurance has been issued to cover hillsides and other areas totally out of reach of any flood short of Noah's.

The GAO study takes a harsh view of waste in the federal program. It is expected to be released within 50 days unless efforts to weaken or delay it are successful.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Candid Letter:

Sen. Jim Buckley tells White Unionists he'll fight 'Reverse Discrimination' quotas

NEW YORK — If bluntness can be alchemized into ballots, Conservative Sen. Jim Buckley has whipped himself up quite a campaign here. Acting on the theory that, in their hearts, many white workers believe they are being put upon by black and Hispanic communities in "reverse discrimination" on the job, Buckley has written directly to the labor chiefs declaring that he is their true champion.

It may surprise his Democratic liberal opponent, Pat Moynihan, in this all-star senatorial race, to learn that seven thousand local officials have just received a letter from Buckley starting with "Dear Union Leader."

Buckley does lay it on the line in this uptight sensitive city -- much of which resembles the Berlin I saw not long after the 1945 Armageddon. Construction work is as low as an Antarctic thermometer. Journeymen craftsmen, no longer labor's elite, have agreed to slash their wages 25 per cent on certain projects. Unemployment even in the rarest building skills runs up to 60 and 70 per cent.

Competition for work is razor sharp among the predominantly white craftsmen members of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades city and state departments. And, adding to the racial tension, the federal courts are zeroing in on the local union membership – with rulings directing the absorption of large numbers of black and Hispanic workers (the latter mostly of Puerto Rican origin).

For a while now the morning mail has brought Sen. Buckley's letter to the desks of hardhat leaders.

"I am the only member of Congress not only to denounce the 'quota system,' of reverse discriminatin in hiring and education, but also to do something about it," writes Buckley.

Then the Conservative-Republican Senator rams home his racial point – still one of the major issues, though now as undiscussed in the marketplace as once upon an ancient time was the private lust of national candidates.

"Unless something is done to stop 'quota' hiring, the seniority rule could well be declared illegal," Buckley says. "My office has been working closely with Local 28, of the Sheet Metal Union in New York, to stop this kind of discrimination."

This local has often been cited as a violator of the rights of minority workers and of affirmative action policies.

Buckley refers to his "bill S. 3069, the Anti-Discrimination Act of 1976" and he avers that it "would eliminate 'goals and timetables' of affirmative action programs, thereby ensuring that hiring and promotion is based on merit, not on quotas. Reverse discrimination, which has worked against so many workers in New York state, has hurt their families as well."

Then Buckley makes his candid bid by adding that, "with your help and the help of the members of your union, I will be able to carry on the fight for six more years. I hope you will be able to bring this letter to the attention of your members."

These letters have been dispatched for weeks now. Some of them have seeped down. This is strong political stuff. It goes down hard. It has antagonized black and Puerto Rican community leaders.

There is an unreported civil war here. At stake are hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of construction and thousands of jobs.

Who does get hired once the wage rates are set? And the money is borrowed. Who will get the contracts? Far more than merely the story of angry racial forces arrayed on the sidewalks of New York, this is the saga of a hundred urban centers. And more than just Local 28 sheet metal workers is involved.

For example, just the other week federal Judge Charles Tenney ruled that two New York City Operating Engineers Locals, 14 and 15, must substantially increase their black and Puerto Rican membership. Substantial means substantial all right -- up to 36 per cent non-white and Hispanic members. And in five years.

For Local 14 this will be more than a 1,200 per cent increase. And for Local 15 -- a 550 per cent jump.

And the judge has permanently restrained the locals from any action which would keep out blacks or Puerto Ricans or discriminate against them in unioin membership practices, job referrals and job training.

There you have it. An unpredecented daring first serve in thsi industrial state. Pat Moynihan's backhand will prove that soon enough. This is no love match. It's the toughest – and most significant– competition around.

Ancestors of the American Indians, history shows, moved from Asia into North America about 20,000 B.C. and were using stone tools and fire.

'Wizard' a rainbow of fantasy and fun

By ANN O'LEARY
WOMEN'S EDITOR

For a while last night, I really thought I was in Kansas ....and in the Emerald City ... and in Munchkinland. It was dress rehearsal for the Little Theatre's production of "The Wizard of Oz," which opens at 8 p.m. tonight at the Sikeston Activity Center.

There are a lot of good things about the show — the cast performances, make-up and costumes, to mention a few. The stage sets are outstanding.

"We hope the audience will be sort of dazzled by our stage sets," comments Vivian Boyer, director. Not to worry. They'll be dazzled all right.

And the Yellow Brick Road will be paved with laughter as the cast leads the audience through the play. Rebecca Perrin of Sikeston is a believable Dorothy, and her vocals are very good. As the Scarecrow, Lee Crites is a delight and remains in character the entire time he is on stage. The performances of Jim Wenneker, the Cowardly Lion, and Randy Couch, the Tin Man, add another dimension of comedy to the cast.

The make-up crew gets a pat on the back, not only for a job well done, but for making each character look distinct. Even the three witches having a coffee klatch are distinguishable from one another.

The Little Theatre and director Vivian Boyer are to be congratulated for staging such an ambitious undertaking as "The Wizard of Oz." The cast of 55 is a large one, but the director has managed to keep all of them, including the energetic Munchkins, working together.

Veteran performers in the cast, in order of appearance, are: Lee Beck, Bruce Eby, Rebecca Perrin, Paula Smith, (wicked witch), Lee Crites, Randy Couch, Jim Wenneker, Peggy Borgsmiller, Francis Schumacher III, Jan Barkett, Karen Beck, Diane Dillon, and Debbie Schuhart.

Newcomers to the Little Theatre stage are Teresa Blunt, Dale Frame, Gary Clark, Sandra April, Bonnie Newton — (Good Witch), Julie Cowell, Janet Hahs, Tonia Thompson, Julie Potashnick, Bill Pothast (Wizard), Weymouth Reed, Lynne Thornton, Benita Beck, Donna Carr, Lori McPhail, Dana Voelker, Mike Chegwidden, Larry Beck, Phillips Chegwidden and Chris Thornton.

Munchkins include: Heather Thornton, Brooke Anne Colley, Teresa Belt, Lisa Carlisle, Robin Wilson, Kim Castleberry, Pam Carroll, Julie Carlisle, Lori Newton, Beth Weber, Mary-Ellen Vanover, Donna Griffin, Cathy Reed, David Reed, Chipper Thornton, Bryan Dillon, Gina Walker, Michelle Foster, Elizabeth Malcolm, Cindy Reynolds, Pam Powell, Terri Van Doren and Julie Potashnick.

Citizens of the Emerald City of Oz are Betty Jane Stewart, Carla Walden, Teresa Belt, Robin Wilson, Kim Castleberry, Mary-Ellen Vanover, Donna Griffin, Pam Carroll, Connie Thompson, Rissa Thompson, and Cindy Reynolds.

Another good thing about this production, which opens the Little Theatre's 17th season, is that if goblins prevent you from going to see it tonight, you can go Friday or Saturday night at 8 p.m., or catch the Sunday matinee at 2 p.m. Go early for tickets, because seating is limited.

Then sit back, and before you know it, you'll be in Kansas, and there will be a twister...

I.Q. doesn't make a doctor

Dear Ann Landers: Your admonition to "Reno, Nevada" to remember that "fifty per cent of the doctors now practicing medicine were in the bottom half of their class" was misleading. If you believe that those who graduated in the upper fifty per cent turned out to be better doctors -- you're wrong.

I'm a medical student who heard you speak at Duke University and thought you were great. That answer wasn't what I expected from you, Ann Landers.

From what I've seen here at Duke (and Harvard before that) I can tell you those academic geniuses often make better research guys than practicing physicians. It's one thing to be brilliant in the lab and another thing to be a compassionate, dedicated doctor.

These days, when it is especially difficult to get into ANY medical school, I've often thought what a pity it is that so many potentially first-rate physicians are being excluded because the emphasis is so heavily slanted toward the academic. Of course a competent physician must know his stuff when it comes to the basic sciences, but the human qualities -- maturity, stability, a sense of dedication and caring -- don't come through in the test and they are extremely important in the making of a fine physician. Sign me -- Durham, N.C.

Dear N.C.: Your concept is right on. And guess who is putting it into practice? The People's Republic of China! They pick their medical students precisely along the lines you mentioned. Academic achievement counts for less than 50 per cent.

Dear Ann: I am married to a man who eats too much, drinks too much and smokes too much. I've fought all those battles and lost, so now I'm writing about a problem I've never seen discussed in your column.

Every night Charles goes to sleep with radio earphones plugged into his ears. He claims he can't sleep without them and even takes the stupid things along when we go on vacation.

Frequently during the night the earplugs fall out and scare me to death with the 3:00 a.m. news or the sudden blast of a rock band. Charles never hears a thing because he's snoring his head off.

I need my rest and would like to know what I can do about this. Some nights I get so mad I feel like strangling him with the earphone cords. Please don't suggest that I sleep elsewhere. We have no spare room .Thanks for whatever help you can give me. -- Baggy-Eyed In Suburbia

Dear B.E.: Do you have adhesive tape in the house? Well, use it to secure the earphones to your husband's head -- and get some rest, honey.

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing for my two younger sisters as well as myself. They are 11 and 13. I am 14. We all have the same problem.

Two weeks ago Dad and Mom split. They are not divorced but they are going to be soon. When people call on the phone and ask for Dad, I don't know what to tell them. Mom doesn't like it when I say, "He doesn't live here anymore."

Can you solve this problem? -- From P.A.

Dear P.A.: Surely your mother knows where your dad is living. When someone calls asking for him, whoever answers the phone should give the caller that information. Nothing more need be said.

A 10-minute call to San Francisco doesn't take a lot of dough.

For just $2.44 or less, you could take down these recipes by Long Distance.

We're printing these recipes to make a point: a Long Distance call lets you say so much, for so little.

In a 10-minute phone call to San Francisco, between 5 p.m. and 11:00 p.m. tonight, you could take down the recipes below. And by dialing 1+, the most you pay is $2.44, plus tax.

So enjoy a pleasant visit tonight by Long Distance. Whether you call to get a couple recipes . . . or just to find out what's cookin'.

1. SOURDOUGH STARTER

1 package active dry yeast
2½ cups warm water (105° to 115°)
1 cup instant nonfat dry milk
2 tablespoons sugar
4 cups all-purpose flour

a) Stir yeast, water, dry milk and sugar in 2½ quart crock or non-metallic bowl until yeast is dissolved. Stir in flour gradually until a smooth batter forms. Let stand loosely covered in warm place, 3 to 5 days. Stir down batter occasionally. Store loosely covered in refrigerator.

b) Replace exact amount of starter used for each recipe by stirring equal amounts of homogenized milk and flour back into starter. (For example, replace 1 cup starter with ½ cup homogenized milk and ½ cup flour). Let stand loosely covered until it bubbles, overnight. Stir down. Each time this process is repeated, the starter becomes more active and develops a more sour flavor. Note: if stored as much as two to three weeks between usings, just pour off the watery layer on top and replace following procedure in (b).

2. SOURDOUGH BREAD STICKS

1 cup instant nonfat dry milk
1 cup warm water (105° to 115°)
1 cup Sourdough Starter (see Recipe No. 1)
2 cups all-purpose flour
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons sugar
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ to 1 cup all-purpose flour
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted

a) Mix dry milk, water, Sourdough Starter and 2 cups flour in non-metallic bowl; cover loosely. Let stand in warm place until mixture is coarse and bubbly, at least 8 hours.

b) Mix oil, salt, sugar and baking soda into sourdough mixture. Stir in enough of the remaining flour to make dough easy to handle. Knead dough lightly on well-floured board, about 2 minutes.

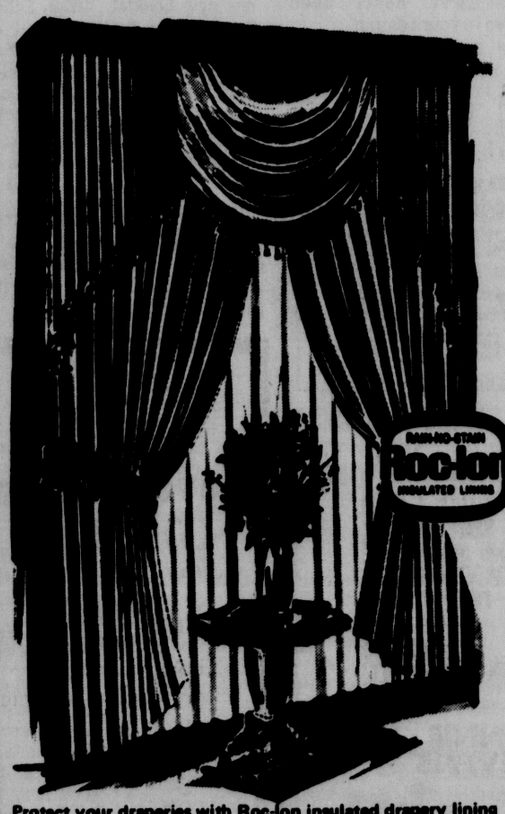

c) Roll dough into rectangle, 15 x 10 inches, on well-floured board. Cut into fifteen 1-inch strips. Roll each strip into even round strand, about 14 inches long. Double strand over and twist to form bread stick. Place bread sticks on greased baking sheet; brush with melted butter. Cover with plastic wrap. Let rise in warm place until double, 1 to 1½ hours.

d) Heat oven to 375°. Bake bread sticks until golden brown, 30 to 35 minutes. (Makes 15)

HOWARD
C. TOOKE

Republican Candidate for STATE SENATOR

Speaks out on BIG GOVERNMENT

I have been a consistent advocate of the concept that Local Government (City and County) is best because it is closer to the people it serves.
Several years ago I supported and worked for a workable Home Rule option now available to most cities if they so choose, but only if they so choose.
I have consistently opposed efforts to impose mandatory statewide standards and programs on local communities, which in many cases would create problems which did not exist.
The City of Cape Girardeau, whom I represented as Mayor, recently won a significant Supreme Court decision declaring States, Counties and Cities to be free from Federal regulation of their employees. This will be a landmark decisions affecting other Constitutional rights of local Governments.

VOTE FOR A MAN WHO BELIEVES LOCAL GOVERNMENT IS BEST AND WHO HAS ACTED IN SUPPORT OF THOSE BELIEFS!

Paid for by Tooke for Senate Committee: C.A. Hood, Chairman, Charles C. Leming, Treasurer Box 783, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Kirkpatrick names bell-weather counties

JEFFERSON CITY — If the general election were held today, Missouri Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick says the returns from only a few counties would probably indicate the winners of each statewide race on the ballot.

Kirkpatrick, Missouri's chief election official, has made a list of the state's "bell-weather" counties which have traditionally supported the winner of statewide races.

Kirkpatrick advises presidential campaign organizations to pay close attention to the mood of the voters in Buchanan County, where St. Joseph is located. That county has supported the winner of each presidential race since 1912, except when a majority of the county's voters voted for Richard Nixon over John F. Kennedy in 1960.

Candidates aspiring to the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by retiring Sen. Stuart Symington should watch election night returns from Ste. Genevieve County. Kirkpatrick says that county, bordering the Mississippi River south of St. Louis, has gone with the winner in all 15 Senate races since 1932.

If tradition holds true in the governor's race, Worth County may be a good barometer this year for pollsters and political analysts. The Iowa border county has missed supporting the winner in only two gubernatorial races -- 1884 and 1924 -- in the last 100 years.

Kirkpatrick believes Jackson County, which includes most of Kansas City, may be the kev in deciding the race for lieutenant governor. Voters there supported the winner 16 consecutive times beginning in 1912.

As a candidate for re-election to his fourth term as secretary of state, Kirkpatrick makes it clear he'll be paying close attention to Buchanan County returns for a reason other than the outcome of the presidential race. Records show Buchanan County voters have established a perfect record in "calling" the winner of the secretary of state's race -- at least since 1884.

Jackson County could be critical to another statewide race this year -- the contest for state treasurer. Jackson County has a perfect record of picking the winner since 1892.

While most political observers in Jefferson City rate the attorney general's race as a tossup -- Kirkpatrick thinks the winning candidate must do well in Cole County, site of the State Capitol. Kirkpatrick says Cole Countians have been accurately picking attorney general winners in 17 consecutive elections since 1908.

While the next election of a state auditor is still two years away, Kirkpatrick advises prospective candidates for the post to spend time campaigning in Jackson and Jefferson counties in particular. Jackson County has gone with the auditor's race winner in 21 elections since 1892, missing a perfect record only in 1916. Jefferson County, just south of St. Louis, has supported the winning candidate for auditor since 1900, except in the election of 1924.

Even though Missourians have been electing their governors and lieutenant governors since 1820, and all state offices since 1852, Kirkpatrick says it's hard to research many election returns from Missouri's early years of statehood.

"Many of the early state records were destroyed by fires. the Missouri Records and Archives program we administer offers careful preservation to existing documents, but the sad truth is much of our history went up in smoke," he said.

Complete statewide returns for all offices are only available beginning with the election of 1896. Some fragmentary election records are maintained in the archives of the secretary of state's office, while Kirkpatrick personally safeguards original volumes of Missouri's Official Manuals dating back to 1878.

Kirkpatrick is quick to note a list of "bell-weather" counties is not a scientific way of predicting elections. A highly mobile population and a decrease of voter participation linked with more "split- ticket" voting habits could quickly change county voting patterns, he says.

"On the other hand," Kirkpatrick observed, "I guess it wouldn't hurt to make another visit to Buchanan County before the election."

Letters to the Editor

Sikeston Standard

Dear Editor:

Another Christmas season is rapidly approaching-- the time of year we most enjoy being with family and friends. However, for many thousands of our fellow Americans this will be a very lonely Christmas; they cannot be with their families because they are stationed overseas with the United States Armed Forces. For a large number of these young men and women this will be the first Christmas away from home.

Your readers can help make this holiday season a little less lonely for many of these young people by joining in the collection of Christmas mail sponsored by Military Overseas Mail. This is an ideal project for school classes, clubs, scouts, and other groups or organizations as well as individuals and families. For more information, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to MOM, Box 4428, Arlington, VA 22204. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Lee Spencer
Coordinator

P.S. Editor-- We would appreciate it very much if this letter could be published around the end of October. Thanks.

2. Card of Thanks

I want to express my sincere thanks to all my friends and neighbors for their kindness and help during the illness and death of my loved one. Although I can never say thanks to you in words the way I really feel in my heart at this time, as I have broken my right arm also. I can't think of a thing left undone by them -- so many beautiful flowers, food, prayers, and gifts of money. Thanks also to Father Bauer and the Sisters for their prayers and visits, to Brother Britt, Kewanee Baptist minister, and Rev. and Mrs. Watkins of the Methodist Church for prayers, visits, and kindness shown by all. My thanks and appreciation to Jim Mills and Jimmy Harrell who were on ambulance duty for their kindness and consideration. These thoughtful deeds will never be forgotten. Thanks to all and may God bless each and every one of you.

and to issue a commission to the appointee.

Shelly then turned in a $45,000 bond Tuesday afternoon, and Judge Ragland called a hearing Wednesday morning to clarify the matter, saying that the bond matter was no longer the issue.

The new sheriff, Farris, a 49-year-old farmer from Braggadocio, and former deputy under Orton in the 1960's, was sworn in and posted the $50,000 bond.

Pemiscot County Prosecutor Mike Hazel said alleged irregularities in Shelly's conduct of office are being investigated, but that no formal charges have been filed against him. Two weeks ago, Hazel filed an ouster petition against Shelly in Circuit Court, alleging he allowed illegal gambling activity in the county.

Tax bills for Scott County will be mailed

BENTON — Approximately 25,000 personal tax bills will be mailed to Scott County residents Friday, according to Scott County Collector tom Marshall.

Marshall said the 1976 tax bills are due upon receipt and are payable through Dec. 31 before becoming overdue and subject to delinquent fines.

The collector said that if any county resident who owns a car fails to receive a tax statement, he or she should contact the county assessor's office because a paid tax statement is required when purchasing new auto license plates.

suggested courses in parent training to help young people learn how to train their children to bring out each child's full potential.

Bond said it is a tragedy when a child graduates from high school and cannot read or write — a growing problem in the country.

Something needs to be done, Bond said, adding that the competency examination is a step in the right direction.

The examination would be given at the end of the eighth grade, he said, and if failed, the student would be given remedial courses until he passed. A student who passes the exam would be given a competency certificate.

Vocational education is an extremely important part of the school system and society, he said.

Bond cited Sikeston's vocational education program as a good example of what can be done. But, he added, other districts in the state have not done as well and need improvement.

Bond said consumer frauds are often perpetrated on young people because they have not been taught how to make wise use of their money. He said courses are needed to train students in the ways of the marketplace.

The state funding formula needs revision, Bond said, because the current formula no longer provides equal funds.

Longtime administrator is retiring from SeMo State

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Southeast Missouri State University will lose a longtime administrator Friday when Mary Helen Flentge retires as associate dean of students.

But through Dean Flentge, a 1932 graduate of the University of Missouri, will no longer be on the campus, she will be remembered there for her philosophy of education and her outspoken views.

The dean has long felt that students should be accorded more respect and responsibilities than they usually receive.

"The most obvious fault there is in education today is the lack of respect shown to students," said Dean Flentge.

"There's damn little of it," added the outspoken dean. "Too many educators have no respect for their students. To them, they're all brats."

Dean Flentge believes this to be a serious under-estimation of the quality of today's youth. "Students respond to the level at which they are treated," she said. "If you assume they are men and women, you hand them a certain amount of maturity. If they don't come up to it, well, it's something to look up for," she continued.

Instead of surpressing students, Dean Flentge believes they should be encouraged.

"It is important to communicate a level of expectation they can obtain, and not one where you hitch your wagon to a star. Few of of us will be stars and none of us needs to be a failure every night," she said.

Dean Flentge was recruited for her position in 1958 by former university president Mark Scully, while she was pursuing a master's degree at the University of Missouri. Though hired as the associate dean of students, she quickly became, at least unofficially, dean of women.

She had some reservations about the unofficial title, remembering the deans of women she had known to be "pigeon-breasted, unsmiling people."

However, her major concern in the beginning was about enforcing discipline. She wasn't sure she could be a strict disciplinarian. However, she came to believe that discipline, not necessarily of a violent nature, can be a valuable learning tool.

"I never asked students to like discipline, but I asked them to understand the necessity," said Dean Flentge.

One of the dean's main regrets during her stay at Southeast Missouri State has been the rapid growth in enrollment.

"The growth has bothered me," she said, adding, "When it was below 2,000, I knew most of the students, or at least the groups they were assocated with. After it reached 3,000, I lost communication."

Dean Flentge, who joined the SeMo State staff after raising two daughters, has strong feelings about the treatment of women, both on the campus and in society at large.

"Women are chattel; that's the traditional role women have played," she declared.

The dean — who can remember the days at SeMo State when women weren't allowed off-campus in slacks, when shorts were forbidden in Academic Hall and when hand-holding between students on campus was prohibited — has always championed the cause of women students.

She was particularly instrumental in the revision of the campus policy on women's hours.

After several years of trying, a key system was initiated for sophomore, junior and senior women. Several more years went by, and the system was extended to freshman women, effectively abolishing women's hours, a move Dean Flentge felt long overdue.

"It's assumed that each young person who comes to college has the responsibility of a key," said the dean, again referring to the respect for students as people which she feels is all too often lacking.

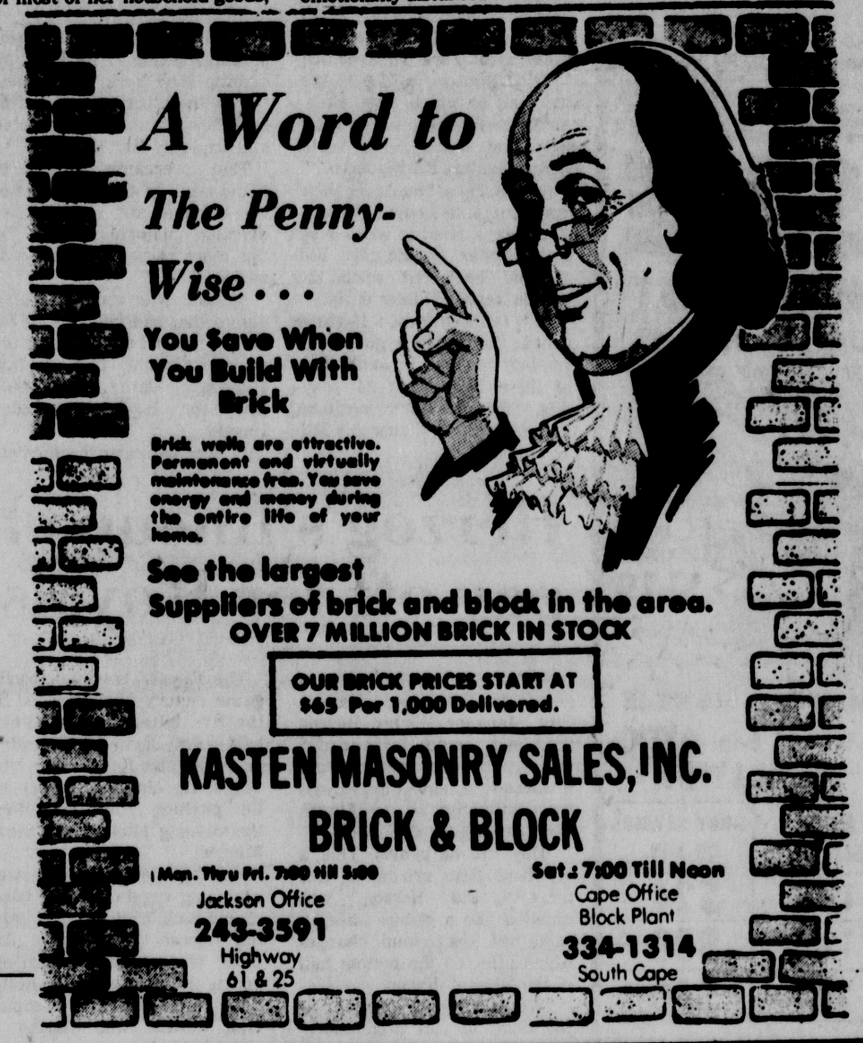

What lies ahead for Dean Flentge? According to her, enjoyment of retirement.

"I'm outspoken. That's an advantage of being old," she said. "You don't have to conform to anything."

She continued, "I'm looking forward to old age so I can dress eccentrically."

Having already sold her home in Cape Girardeau and disposed of most of her household goods, Dean Flentge, immediately after her last day on the job, plans to move to New York City, which is where her daughters live. One is an executive recruiter and vice president of a firm and the other is a teacher of emotionally disturbed children.

What does she plan to do first? Exactly what one would expect of any self- respecting women's rights advocate: Attend the opera, "The Barber of Seville", starring Beverly Sills and conducted by Sarah Caldwell.

Royals kayo Catfish to even series

NEW YORK (AP) — Having beaten New York Yankees ace Catfish Hunter in the game they had to win to stay alive, the Kansas City Royals go after their first World Series berth tonight against Ed Figueroa.

The Yankees, hoping for their first American League pennant in 12 years, tried to wrap it up with Hunter Wednesday. But the bid backfired when the Royals kayoed Hunter early.

That left Figueroa, a 19-game winner during the regular season but the loser in Game Two of these best-of-five AL playoffs, for tonight's deciding game. Today is Figueroa's 28th birthday.

The Royals forced the championship series to its limit by beating New York 7-4 Wednesday with a barrage of extra-base hits that included a double and triple by Hal McRae.

That overcame a pair of home runs by Graig Nettles of the Yankees and sent the two division champions back for one more game in this see-saw series.

McRae, who broke out of a slump that had left him hitless in the first three games of the series, thought that beating Hunter in Game Four would give the Royals the edge tonight.

"I feel we have the momentum now," said McRae. "I think we're in the best position. We beat their best pitcher — their big gun. They won't have the same faith in the guy they throw tomorrow (Thursday night) that they had today (Wednesday)."

Yankees Manager Billy Martin bristled at that suggestion. "Figueroa will start the fifth game, and we have a lot of faith in him," he said.

What was Martin's reason for using Figueroa, who has lost three decisions to Kansas City this season, including the second game of the playoffs?

"Nineteen wins," snapped the Yankees manager. "That's a pretty good reason."

Ignored as a possible starter for the final game was left-hander Ken Holtzman, a veteran of playoff and World Series competition during his years in Oakland. "Holtzman hasn't been pitching well lately," said Martin. "I really didn't consider him."

If the Yankees had no plans for Holtzman, Royals Manager Whitey Herzog could have used him on loan. Asked about his fifth game starter, Herzog had to hedge Wednesday night.

"I have no idea right now," he said. "I have a choice of four — Dennis Leonard, Marty Pattin, Al Fitzmorris and Paul Splittorff. If I had Holtzman, I'd pitch him."

Splittorff, who pitched 5 2-3 innings of shutout relief in Game Two, would have had the assignment almost automatically if he had not had to warm up Wednesday. But he was anxious for another shot at the Yankees.

Leonard was the second game starter and was knocked out early. But Herzog thinks the 17-game winner could do a creditable job. "He's a power pitcher and if he throws strikes he can give them trouble," the manager said.

Fitzmorris is the only Royals player who has not played in the series so far. "If I pitched, I'd feel strange," he said. "I think my bid was turned down."

Pattin faced just one batter in his only playoff appearance. "I'm ready," he said. "I should be strong. I couldn't get the ball over the plate the other night."

Herzog's lineup changes pay off for Royals

NEW YORK (AP) — In a desperate situation, Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog displayed some level-headed strategy—level-headed because it worked and saved the Royals from extinction in the American League playoff series.

"Hey I'm no genius. This is my first time around at this thing," said Herzog, who sounded like a genius when he explained the lineup changes which affected the bottom half of the Royals' lineup.

"We just haven't gotten the job done in run production," said Herzog, whose Royals hammered five extra-base hits in beating the New York Yankees 7-4 Wednesday and squaring their best-of-five series at two games apiece.

A victory in Game 5 tonight will send the Royals on to the World Series against the National League champion Cincinnati Reds.

"The pressure will be even," said Herzog. "We've each won two games and we've each lost two games."

The Royals' essential fourth-game victory was produced by the five hitters in the bottom half of the lineup who accounted for all nine Kansas City hits. There was also some clutch relief pitching from Doug Bird, the winning pitcher, and Steve Mingori.

One key move by Herzog was replacing regular second baseman Frank White with 37-year-old veteran Cookie Rojas. Another was making 21-year-old rookie Jamie Quirk the designated hitter instead of slumping Hal McRae, who started in right field.

"Cookie's a better hitter and more of a clutch ballplayer," said Herzog of Rojas, a 15-year veteran with four different teams who has never played in a World Series. "I wanted to get Cookie's bat in the lineup because we needed offensive help."

The help he got from Rojas was two singles, two runs scored and a sacrifice fly.

Quirk preceded Rojas in the rejuvenated Royals' lineup, hitting in the sixth position. Before his starting assignment Wednesday, Quirk was hitless in two at bats.

But in his second at-bat Wednesday, Quirk hit a booming drive to left-center field that scored McRae with the Royals' fourth run and sent Yankee starter Catfish Hunter to the showers. A sacrifice fly by Rojas then brought home Quirk and gave the Royals a 5-2 lead.

"Just to face Catfish Hunter is a dream," said Quirk, a .246 batter in 64 games with the Royals this season. "I haven't played too much, although Whitey has put me in some tough games as DH."

None was any tougher or more important than Wednesday's game.

The big gun offensively for the Royals was their little pistol, 5-foot-4 shortstop Freddie Patek. The smooth-fielding shortstop, batting from the No. 8 position, smacked a pair of doubles and knocked in three runs.

Reds players divided on who they's rather face

CINCINNATI (AP) — They're playing a waiting game in Cincinnati — and they don't seem to care who shows up at Riverfront Stadium Saturday.

The Cincinnati Reds, fresh from their three-game sweep of Philadelphia in the National League playoffs, began looking ahead to the World Series.

For some, it was a matter of taking on the bigger name.

For others, it was a matter of raking in a bigger paycheck.

And for most, it was a matter of believing that whichever team wound up representing the American League would also wind up a loser.

"I don't care who we play because these guys represent the best team in baseball," Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson said Wednesday as he awaited the outcome of the best-of-five playoff between the New York Yankees and Kansas City Royals, now tied 2-2.

"There isn't another club in baseball that can match the eight players we can put on the field every day," Anderson added. "This isn't any three or four-man team, like most clubs."

Anderson said he believed "some of the younger players are hoping it will be in New York. But that's because Yankee Stadium seats more than the Kansas City park and they're figuring that playing New York will mean more money to them."

Gary Nolan, the right-hander who started the final game of the Reds' playoff against the Phillies, said emphatically that he was hoping to play New York "because I figure it's a once-in-a-lifetime shot. I've never seen Yankee Stadium except on television. And it would sure make me feel proud, standing out there on the mound."

Pete Rose also said he would prefer going against New York, but for a more practical reason. "I know the Yankees' pitchers better because I've faced most of them before," he said. "I guess you might say it's a psychological thing with me, but it always bothers me when I'm facing a pitcher for the first time."

Ray Shore, Cincinnati's special assignment scout who has been keeping close tabs on both American League playoff clubs, said he would rather see the Royals win the AL flag.

"Kansas City, that's the club I'd like for us to play in the series," Shore said. "The Yanks have the more experienced staff and I think they'd have a better chance of holding down our hitters. And the Kansas City park has Astroturf like ours. That's another reason why I'd rather see us play them than the Yankees."

7For the most part, though, the Reds were being non-committal about their possible opponent.

"I don't care which team it is," said left-hander Don Gullett, the Cincinnati starter in the World Series opener, summing up the Reds' viewpoint. "All I know is I'll be ready when Saturday comes."

Play-On Words Strong Suit Of Armour

THE HAPPY BOOKERS. By Richard Armour. McGraw-Hill. 132 Pages. $6.95.

This little volume bears the subtitle "A Playful History of Librarians and Their World from the Stone Age to the Distant Future," and a lucky thing it does, lest the browsing reader, unfamiliar with Richard Armour's penchant for pun and games, takes it to be the story of theatrical agents who like their work.

The jacket blurb promises that this is a "largely factual" account, but the history is a little hard to keep track of when viewed through the author's wry eye. Examples:

—The first public library was established by C.A. Pollio, who flourished in the first century B.C., long before the Salk vaccine.

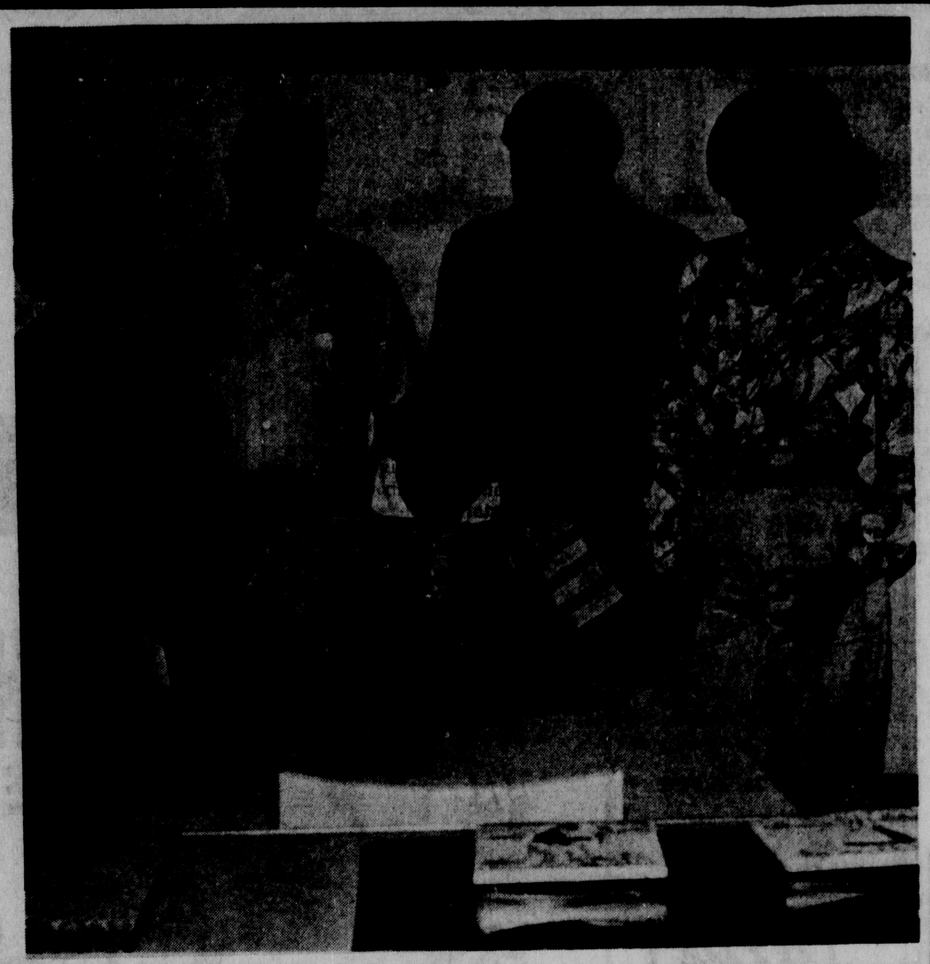

—Until the invention of typography, there was little or no opportunity for what was to become the most exciting feature of the printed book: the typographical error.

—In a sense, the pyramids were libraries, as they contained guidebooks which would tell the deceased where he would go. He might have been told this while alive but was too annoyed to pay attention.

In addition to this wealth of knowledge is a chapter on the Dewey Decimal System which explains once and for all which Dewey (Melvil) is responsible for its invention, as well as which Deweys (too numerous to mention) had nothing whatsoever to do with it.

One annoying feature of the book's layout is the use of footnotes when parentheses (like this) would have made for much smoother reading.

But, if a distorted history laced with groan-inducing puns is your reading pleasure, or if you just want a little book to have a good time with, run down to your local bookseller for a copy of "The Happy Bookers."

Don Miller signs his name to a St. Louis Cardinal minor league contract yesterday at the home of his parents here in Sikeston. Don Miller inks pact with St. Louis Cardinals

Former Sikeston High School and University of New Mexico hurler Don Miller signed a minor league contract with the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday afternoon at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Don Miller of 911 South Prairie in Sikeston.

Miller, 22, will report to the Cardinals' spring training camp in St. Petersburg, Florida, according to Redbird scout Gary Howard of Sikeston. Howard said that after having a chance to show what he can do in spring training, Miller would be assigned to the Cardinals' Calgary, Alberta team in the Pioneer League. The Calgary team was formerly the Sarasota team at the rookie level.

"This is something I've always wanted to do," said the tall righthander, who worked for the Sikeston Saints team in the Bi-State League this past summer after a layoff of more than a year from organized baseball. "I'm going to give it my best shot."

It was sparkling 1-0 shutout against the Cape Capahas here in Sikeston that particularly caught the attention of the Cardinals. Miller was invited to an individual tryout at Busch Stadium, where the decision was made to sign the Sikeston athlete to a contract.

Miller played for the Sikeston Bulldogs in high school, where he earned all-state honors. Perhaps the most memorable game hurled by the curveballing hurler was a 1-0 victory over Gideon in the finals of the District Tournament in 1971. The opposing pitcher was Mark Littell, now with the Kansas City Royals.

Don performed at the University of New Mexico beginning in the 1972 season, where he compiled a combined three-season record of 21-4. He graduated in 1975.

The signing sent baseball experts checking to find out the last time a Sikeston player signed a Cardinal contract. Most agreed that the most recent Cardinal signee from Sikeston was Lindon Duncan, who played at SHS in the early 1950's.

Don and his wife, Drew, reside at the Ramadaparts in Miner.

Advance and Bloomfield in Stoddard finals

ESSEX -- Advance and Bloomfield will square off tonight at approximately 7:30 at the Richland High School gymnasium in the varsity finals of the Stoddard county Volleyball Tournament.

Both picked up semifinal round victories Wednesday night.

Fourth-seeded Advance powered its way past Woodland 15-10 and 15-4 in the opening varsity matchup. Second-seeded Bloomfield dumped Bernie 15-1 and 15-12.

In the junior varsity tournament, third-seeded Bloomfield blasted Dexter 15-3 and 15-0, while Bernie, unseeded in the event, pulled its second upset in a row, dumping top-seeded Advance 15-10 and 15-13.

Tonight, Advance and Bloomfield meet at 6:30 for the junior varsity championship, followed by the A team finals at about 7:30.

Blues win 3-2 over Colorado

DENVER (AP) — Floyd Thomson converted a pass from Larry Patey with 6:16 remaining in the game Wednesday night, insuring the St. Louis Blues' 3-2 triumph over the Colorado Rockies in a National Hockey League game.

Thomson took the pass 10 feet in front of the Colorado goal and rammed it past goalie Michel Plasse to build the St. Louis lead to 3-1 and help the Blues survive Gary Croteau's goal just under two minutes later.

A St. Louis penalty in the closing seconds gave the Rockies a manpower advantage and Colorado ramoved Plasse with 28 seconds left in an effort to gain a tie. But St. Louis cleared the puck and skated off the final seconds to record the decision.

The Blues' Garry Unger slapped home his second goal of the season early in the second period to open the scoring, but Nelson Pyatt tied it midway through the session.

Over 300 attend rites for Pirate hurler Moose

EXPORT, Pa. (AP) — The baseball players who shared his victories carried pitcher Bob Moose of the Pittsburgh Pirates to his grave here in his hometown.

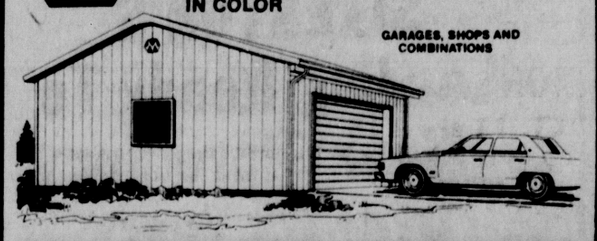

Pirates outfielder Al Oliver, joined by pitchers Jim Rooker, Bruce Kison and Dave Giusti, bore the casket to the grave site Wednesday after funeral services for Moose, who died in a weekend car crash.

Also attending was former Pirates pitcher Dock Ellis, who was the winning pitcher the night before as the New York Yankees defeated Kansas City in the third game of the American League championships.

Ellis flew into Pittsburgh for the funeral and chartered a heliocopter to this Westmoreland County town.

"Bob's death reminds us of the brevity of life," said the Rev. Gervase Chutis said of the 29-year-old Moose.

The Rev. Chutis baptized Moose and married him and his wife, Alberta, in St. Marys Catholic Church, the same church where the funeral service was held.

Local schools note 'school lunch week'

How does one go about planning meals for 3,000 people every day?

"It isn't easy," says Dorothy Lawrence, director of food services for Sikeston Public Schools. "The most important thing to consider is the time element and what the ladies can get done in the time they have to prepare."

This is National School Lunch Week; and now, more than ever before, school lunches are a vital part of education in Sikeston's public schools. All of the cooking is done at the facilities in the high school, and the food is transported via hot carts to other Sikeston schools.

"All the carts have temperature controls," Mrs. Lawrence explains. "The women turn them on first thing in the morning, and the only time they are turned off is during the actual transportation." In this way the food stays hot for all the schools.

Several improvements have been made over the past few years in the Sikeston system. All schools now have deep fat fryers except the middle school, and food such as French fries, burritos, fish and other fat-fried items can be prepared by the cooks at the individual schools.

"We try to plan around our government commodities," Mrs. Lawrence says, "though many people will be surprised to learn that government commodities only comprise about 17 per cent of the food we use."

There are also government requirements in a Type A program, and the food service staff must be sure to include two ounces of edible protein, three-fourths cup of fruits and-or vegetables, one-half pint of milk, a slice of bread or its equivalent, and necessary vitamins and minerals.

"Then, after all the requirements and time are considered, we do try to include food which the students will like."

Mrs. Lawrence admits that kids like anything on a bun. "Whether it's a hamburger, barbecue, juicy burger or a hot dog, kids really like to eat sandwiches made with a bun."

The goal of the food service staff is variety, and they try to include different kinds of food, giving the students a choice. There is a special a la carte line at the junior and senior high schools, and there is always a hot dog substitution in addition to the regular plate at the middle school.

If you're wondering how much food it takes to serve 3,000 tacos, start with 450 pounds of ground beef. If you want a hamburger plate, start with 500 pounds of ground beef, 650 pounds of frozen French fries and 90 three-fourth quart cans of vegetables.

Or better yet, leave it to Dorothy Lawrence and the food service staff. They know.

SeMo U. students get break

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Most students at Southeast Missouri State University took a series of six- week examinations last week. This week they get their reward in the form of a one- day break from classes on Friday.

While the students and faculty will be away, however, others on the campus will not be at play. Administrative offices will remain open.

Friday's break is the first for the students since the fall semester began on Aug. 23, and there will not be another until the Thanksgiving recess which begins at noon on Nov. 24 and ends at 8 a.m. Nov. 29.

Fall semester final examinations are scheduled Dec. 13-16, and then the students will have a long vacation. The spring semester begins on Jan. 10.

On the lightside!

KOHLER, Wis. (AP) — Some people have dogu that will bring them the newspaper. Scamp, a 9-year-old cocker spaniel, brings home his own fresh-picked apples.

Elmer and LaVerne Bridson, Scamp's owners, say he developed his love of apples several years ago.

"He happened to be sitting under a tree when one fell down in front of him," Mrs. Bridson said Tuesday. "He sniffed it, rolled it over and finally took a bite."

It wasn't long before Scamp refused to wait for people to give him apples and started picking his own from low-hanging branches.

SeMo U grad returns as the new placement director

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A 1957 Southeast Missouri State University graduate has been appointed acting director of placement at the university.

Dr. William G. Grimsley assumed the duties at the university upon the departure of Ronald E. King in mid-September. King took a position at the University of Missouri-Columbia, where he will also be a part-time doctoral student.

Grimsley, 41, was most recently associated with the Colorado Department of Education, where he spent four years in various positions. He was an evaluation consultant, the director of a program involving 10 states and an assistant to the associate commissioner.

After receiving bachelor of science degrees in both secondary education and business administration from Southeast Missouri State, Grimsley began his career in education as a teacher in Sikeston. He later taught and was a counselor at Kahoka and Jefferson City, and he served as acting vice principal in the Kansas City school system.

At the college level, Grimsley has been a counselor, research assistant and graudate assistant at the University of Missouri. He also spent two years as a research associate for the Minnesota Higher Education Coordination Commission, where he worked on a study of the postsecondary educational needs of the urban disadvantaged in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area.

Grimsley received his master's degree in guidance and student personnel administration from Teachers College at Columbia University in New York in 1960 and his doctor of philosophy degree in education administration from the University of Missouri in 1969.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Grimsley of 919 Park Ave., Sikeston.

Missouri has
"a Man and a Record to Trust"

James I. Spainhower
Democrat for Re-election
STATE TREASURER

He served four terms in the Missouri Legislature.

His educational degrees include: Bachelor of Divinity, Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts and a Doctorate in Political Science.

His investments as State Treasurer have earned over $71 million in interest. That's 45% of all interest earned by Missouri in the 20 years the law has permitted the investment of idle funds.

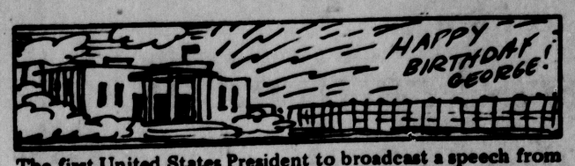

He increased from 74% to 96% the daily average of all state funds earning interest.

He has more than doubled (from 260 to 590) the number of banks holding interest-bearing state funds.

His investment policies earn far more interest and . . .
. . . encourage banks to make more loans to needy Missouri students
. . . provide needed capital in areas of special economic hardship.
. . . promote the creation and expansion of industry throughout the state.
. . . encourage banks to participate actively in projects to better their local communities.

Jim Spainhower has become widely involved in Missouri's economic and monetary affairs, allowing him to speak out authoritatively on issues affecting the taxpayer's pocket book. He has the reputation for being a fiscal conservative who makes the very most of each tax dollar.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Marshall are parents of a baby girl born on the 11th.

That three to two score sounds like a baseball game, but was the final result of one of the closest and hardest fought football games ever played by Charleston and Sikeston High Schools. Sikeston scored a safety in the first five minutes of play, when a Charleston punt was blocked behind the goal line, Charleston recovering. Charleston edged into the lead halfway through the third quarter, Faris booting a place kick over for the only other score of the game.

Notes of the game. The player directly responsible for Sikeston's defeat is a former Sikeston High man. Ogilvie, carrying the ball far into Sikeston's territory on an intercepted pass, gave Charleston the ball in a position where they were able to score. Ogilvie attended Sikeston High last fall for a few weeks, transferring to Charleston, when his mother moved to that town.

Southeast Missouri wells to be measured again

ROLLA— The Water Resources Division of the U.S. Geological Survey will begin an intensive two-week program Monday to again measure ground-water levels in the Southeast Lowlands.

About 750 wells which were measured in October 1975 and April are included in the water-level network. This network is part of the ground-water data-collection program for the evaluation of the water resources of the Southeastern Lowlands.

The measurements will be used to construct water-level change maps through the periods October 1975 to October 1976, and April 1976 to October 1976. These change maps will help determine the stresses on the aquifer during the previous year and during the last summer.

The three-year study of the water resources of the Southeastern Lowlands is a cooperative project of the Department of Natural Resources, Division of Geology and Land Survey and the U.S. Geological Survey. The staffs of both agencies are involved in the overall studies.

The 4,000 square-mile study area includes all of Dunklin, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Scott and Stoddard counties and parts of Bollinger, Butler, Cape Girardeau, Ripley and Wayne Counties.

The study, which was prompted by the rapid irrigation development in the last 15 years, will provide quantitative information on the potential for future development of the ground-water system for agriculture and industry.

This study is being made under the direction of Anthony Homyk, district chief, U.S. Geological Survey, Water Resources Division, and Dr. Wallace B. Howe, state geologist and director, Division of Geology and Land Survey, DNR.

The field party will consist of G. Alexander, L. F. Emmett, E. J. Harvey, R. R. Luckey, G. B. Malone and H. L. Reed. The coopertation of the landowners in southeast Missouri will be greatly appreciated by the field party.

The people of France gave the Statue of Liberty to the people of the United States to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the United States. The French raised $450,000 to pay for it. It came to the United States in 1885.

Hates to be paid

Fix-it man makes repairs fun

CHENOA, Ill. (AP) — Housewives for miles around are taking their broken appliances to Loyal (Slim) Augspurger, who does fine repair work and hates to get paid for it.

Since Slim, 72, opened a fix-it shop three years ago in the basement of his home in this central Illinois community, he has repaired several thousand appliances — small ones like toasters, electric irons, fans, blenders, coffee makers and vacuum cleaners. He has a backlog of more than 100 awaiting repairs.

"I don't like to take money for what I like to do," he says. "I charge just enough to pay for some replacement parts and now and then to replace a tool. For instance, a broken $10 or $20 appliance, I'll make it run like new for around $2.50 even if I have to spend four or five hours on it. If they took it to a big store the minimum would be $6 to $8.

"I just enjoy doing it. The name of the game isn't money, it's being happy doing what you're doing. I don't need money, so I don't try to make it. I don't have the time to fool around with it, anyway," he says.

Augspurger, who is on Social Security, says there was no pension plan when he retired after 27 years as a stone quarry superintendent. His son, Marlow, left an appliance store to open his own repair shop for large household items like refrigerators. He gave his dad an assortment of small parts.

"He left me 100 drawers and jars full of tubes, screws, transistors and other things," says Slim, who stands 6-feet-2 and weighs 150 pounds. "So I had to learn how to fix things. I just started out and learned as I went along.

"I've never had a dissatisfied customer. In fact," he adds, "some of them were so happy with my work they thought I undercharged them and mailed me more money."

Slim says his most difficult job was repairing the corroded wiring of an electric pot that a housewife had tried to clean by submerging it in a basin of water and detergent. "It took me about 10 hours to fix it. I charged $5. Such a thing is a challenge for an older person. Part of the joy of fixing is helping people in trouble out of it."

Slim also gets personal satisfaction collecting old fans with brass blades. He has 17 of them, one from 1898. "I fixed them all. It was just lovely," he said.

Government in the United States now employs one out of six workers and controls more than one-third of total spending, The Conference Board notes.

The heaviest chicken on record is named "Weirdo" and weighs 22 pounds.

ANNUAL HUNTING GUIDE

To hunt, or not to hunt--that is the question.

While apologies may be due to William Shakespeare, there will be no such apologies passed between two powerful forces--the sportsmen of America and the conservation groups who oppose the hunting of game.

Hunters, who for the most part are conservationists in the truest meaning of the word, have been pictured by wildlife protection groups as cold-hearted killers, preying on the defenseless animals and hunting "merely for the thrill of the kill".

This stereotype is probably true in a few isolated cases. There are a few "hunters" who refuse to buy licenses, bait their dove hunting grounds, use bright lights to hunt deer at night and sell their illegally-taken meat on the black market for a handsome profit.

Unfortunately, these few "sportsmen" ruin the image of hunting for the majority.

But the truth is that most hunters--those who abide by the established rules and who enjoy the challenge and the sport of a good hunt--are genuinely concerned about the welfare of wildlife.

By the heavy taxes placed upon hunters in the form of hunting licenses, deer tags, duck stamps and by the taxes levied on guns and ammunition, the hunters of America share most of burden of funding the conservation programs that make sure that game remain plentiful. By the placing of quotas and other restrictions on the amount of game that can be taken, the delicate balance between the wildlife population and the amount of food available to them is scientifically maintained. For these things, the hunter must get most of the credit.

So with the first Daily Standard Hunting Section, we salute the hunters of Missouri and America. We hope the information within these pages will in some small way help you in your activities this fall an winter. Good hunting!

Missouri hunters can expect mixed bag in '77

By JOEL M. VANCE
Missouri Department of Conservation

Missouri hunters this year can expect a mixed bag as far as success goes.

Some species appear to be in good supply, especially rabbits. Others may be down, but not enough to cause worry.

Deer hunting has taken over as Missouri's most popular hunting sport. There were 221,472 firearms deer hunters in 1975.

Rabbits, traditionally the most-sought-after game animal, attracted 219,477 hunters, who took nearly 2.1 million cottontails.

Squirrels made up the most numerous bag in 1975. Some 217,767 hunters took home 2,955,300 bushytails.

The outlook for squirrel hunters in 1976 is fairly good, but a hard freeze and drought have cut heavily into acorn and other nut production.

That always cuts into the next year's squirrel crop, so hunters may find slim pickings in 1977.

Dove hunting should stay good until extreme cold weather. Drought induced farmers to cut corn for silage this year and silage cuts always are a set table for doves. Cold weather drives younger doves south, but older birds sometimes stick around all winter.

Missouri's duck season should be a good one, but the long range forecast for ducks is pessimistic. Part of the problem is a developing drought cycle that already has resulted in a decline in several species (9 per cent overall, ranging from 3 percent on canvasbacks to 27 percent on bluewing teal).

The state also showed a decline in its only native nesting duck, the wood duck, totaling nine per cent.

Rabbit production is the highest since 1959, with an average statewide of 1.1 rabbit per square mile.

Quail surveys, complicated by extreme drought, show an adequate production for bird hunters, but nothing to rave about.

Missouri goose hunters are reaping the reward of their patience several years ago. In 1968, goose managers decided that increasing pressure on the eastern prairie population -- made it necessary to increase the post-season size of the flock.

But, in the spring of 1969, a disastrous snowstorm on Hudson's Bay breeding grounds cut heavily into the flock. Hunters saw the quotas drop from 25,000 at Swan Lake to 14,000 as goose managers tried to restore the health of the flock and to reach the 200,000 post-season population level.

It all came together last season, when the quota rose again to 25,000 without damaging the breeding population. This year, once again, the quota is still 25,000 and the future for the big birds is bright.

Most game is at least average in numbers. Despite a 51,000-deer harvest last year, the deer population looks good. Most areas have slightly more restrictive seasons this year to allow the doe population to recover from the loss of nearly 20,000 animals in the total 1975 harvest.

Deer biologists think that the Ozark area of the state is far below the deer population it could sustain without damage to the habitat.

They think most areas of north Missouri are near the optimum level, but many Ozark counties could double their deer population and still have good habitat. Missouri deer hunting has grown astonishingly in the last few years. Only 10 years ago, in 1966, there were 28,423 deer taken by 142,518 hunters.

In 1975, gun and bowhunters took a record 53,673 deer and the number of hunters had leaped to near the quarter-million mark.

Many not clear about gun laws

There are many myths floating about concerning the gun laws of Missouri. It would be good to find out just what a hunter or sportsman can do or cannot do with his gun--whether it be a rifle, shotgun or pistol.

Sawed off rifles or shotguns or machine guns, obviously, are banned in Missouri. But try to visualize the questions any sportsman would ask if he were entering the state with guns or if he were purchasing a gun for the first time.

As for carrying a gun on the street openly, there is no law against it. As long as you don't try to conceal it.

Is it legal, then, for a farmer to carry his guns on a rack across the back window of his pickup? Yes, it is legal, as long as he isn't flashing his lights across fields at night looking for game.

According to Missouri laws you technically could carry a pistol in each hand down the street as long as you don't flourish it in a menacing, angry or threatening manner. But whether concealed or in plain view, you cannot take a gun into a public assembly-- whether it be a picnic or church.

According to Sgt. Floyd Dunlap of the Kirkwood Police, one of countless communities which may have its own laws, you can walk down the street with a pistol in each hand and be legal "But we'd have a dozen calls in a few minutes and we'd have to check you out. We'd want to make sure you were peaceful."

It would be impossible to write a brochure on gun laws, especially concealed weapons. All laws depend on circumstances and intent. Even a farmer on his own land, under certain conditions, can be arrested for carrying a concealed weapon.

If you carry a gun on your floorboard at night it is considered a concealed weapon because the darkness hides it.

The Public Safety Firearms Code says no youngster 16 years of age or younger may carry a gun without being accompanied by an adult 21 or older--much less fire that gun. This apparently also covers farm kids.

And no gun may be fired across any road or highway, sidewalk or park. And you cannot fire from a boat, nor can you fire across or into the Missouri, Mississippi or Meramec Rivers or any lake or reservoir.

To hunt on someone else's property you must have permission from the owner.

And, of course, most municipalities won't let you fire a gun within the city limits.

The Missouri Conservation Department, of course, has its firearm rules for hunting. The worst offense is jacklighting for deer. Carrying a spot light in one hand and a gun in the other brings a swift fine. But you can use a flashlight and gun for hunting frogs and any fur-bearing animal such as a racoon when a dog is used to tree them.

Any sporting gun, except a shotgun larger than 10 gauge, may be used to take game except beaver, mink, muskrat and fish.

Pistols and rifles may not be used on birds. And shotguns must be limited to three shells.

To buy a pistol, you need a permit from the county sheriff.

Point values for ducks change

Waterfowl regulations for 1976 have been set in most states and, despite some changes in the point value of certain species of ducks and an early morning rather than noon starting time on opening day, the seasons will be much the same as last year.

Each year in August, guidelines are set for waterfowl seasons by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Each state, then, must draw up their own season regulations within this federal framework, which are subject to approval by the federal agency.

Some controversy errupted at this year's Flyway Council meeting when, despite a report by the Fish and Wildlife Service that this year's duck flight is down slightly from last year, the federal waterfowl managers set hunting guidelines that are more liberal than last year. Naturally, many of the biologists, who tend to be cautious in such matters, opposed these liberal guidelines. This eventually led to the warmed-over disputes between the northern and southern states in the Flyway Council, which resulted in nothing. The guidelines were adapted as proposed.

Essentially, the big changes are in point values. Duck which were 90 points last year are worth 70 this year. All birds which were worth 35 points last year are valued at 25 this year. This means that a hunter who bags a 70 point duck, such as a mallard hen or wood duck, can take three more 10 point ducks that same day, rather than one more, which was the case last year when these ducks were worth 90 points. Naturally, it's a good deal for the hunter.

The big news this year, however, has nothing to do with point values or shooting hours or number of ducks. The critical factor surrounding this year's water fowl season is the weather — a factor which single-handedly could cause waterfowl hunting this year to be the worse in years.

For example, Swan Lake, Missouri's popular goose and duck hunting area in the north- central part of the state, is completely dry. This is a lake which normally holds about 2000 acres of water. Silver Lake, the other main body of water in the Swan Lake Refuge, is low, but there is still some water there.

Illinois officials report that the Mississippi and Illinois Rivers are lower than they've been in years. While this allows food plants to grow on the soft mud banks, it will not be enough to attract a substantial number of ducks. The water is just too low. This year, while oiling up your shotgun and building that blind, put in a few prayers for rain. Then, have at it.

A 50-- day, split season has been set for Missouri duck hunters, opening Oct. 26 and running through Dec. 5, and opening again Dec. 26 and running through Jan. 3, 1977. Shooting hours are one-half hour before sunrise to sunset with a daily limit of ducks that reaches or exceeds 100 points.

The split season is something new for Missouri hunters, according to Mike Milonski, wildlife division chief of the Missouri Department of Conservation.

"We thought we'd try the split season this year to see how it works." Milonski said. "It is only an experiment which, if unsuccessful, will be dropped. What we're trying to do is give the hunters in the southern portion of the state a crack at late birds."

Canvasbacks are worth 100 points with hunting closed to this species on the Mississippi River from Alton Dam north to the Iowa line. Ducks valued at 70 points are mallard hens, wood ducks, black ducks, red heads and hooded mergansers. Pintail, teal, gadwall, scaup, shoveller and mergansers (other than hooded) are all worth 10 points. All other ducks, including mallard drakes, baldpate, goldeneye, etc., are worth 25 points.

Goose hunters will have a 45 day season beginning Oct. 26 and running through Dec. 10 with a daily limit of 1 Canada and 1 whitefront, and a possession limit of 2 Canadas and 2 whitefronts.

The Swan Lake zone will have a quota of 25,000 birds with hunting to begin Oct. 26 and running until Dec. 10, or until the quota is reached, whichever comes first.

Goose hunting in the Lower Mississippi Zone will also run 45 days, beginning Dec. 7 to Jan. 21, 1977. Daily limit is 2 Canadas or 2 Whitefront, or 1 of each with a possession limit of 4 birds in the aggregate, no more than 2 of which can be Canadas.

Goose hunting for Blue and Snow Geese will open Oct. 26 and run for 70 days, closing Jan. 3, 1977. The daily and possession limit on these birds is 5, which presents a variety of possibilities. A hunter may take five Blue or five Snow geese, or a combination of the two that equals five. Or, he may take one Canada and four Blues or Snows or one Canada and one Whitefront and three Blues or Snows -- as long as the daily total does not exceed five geese.

Wood ducks, such as those shown in nesting boxes above, are worth 70 points, according to the new revised point system established by the Department of Conservation. Waterfowl hunters may not kill another bird after they have accumulated 100 points in a single day.

Deer conditions different from those in 1975

For many hunters, the whitetail deer is the biggest of game.

Some never get the opportunity to hunt anything bigger. Others have hunted many species of large animals and consider the whitetails the most wary of the lot.

In 1975, nearly a quarter of a million hunters took to the deer woods of Missouri. They harvested a record 51,823 deer.

Deer hunting is a combination of comraderie with other hunters and of doing it yourself -- thinking man against an animal equipped with superlative senses of hearing, smell, sight and instinct.

Last Year's large harvest was made because does were legal quarry at the beginning of the season. This year, the restrictions make does legal at the end of the season in some zones, illegal in others and place a quota on them in still others.

In addition, hunting conditions are going to be much different in 1976. Drought and near-drought conditions will change the movement patterns the deer follow.

Unless there are large amounts of rainfall between now and opening day (November 13), deer must visit farms ponds and the larger streams for water. Many small streams are dry.

In addition, late spring frosts killed or damaged the nut and acorn crops in bottomland areas. The acorn crop is fair on the ridge tops.

The nine-day firearms season will run from Saturday, November 13, through Sunday, November 21.

Management units 1, 4, 7 and 10 will be bucks-only for the entire season.

Units 2 and 3 will be bucks-only November 13-19 and any deer November 20-21.

Units 5, 6 and 12 will be bucks-only for the entire season, with quotas of antlerless deer set for each zone.

The quotas are 2,500 for Unit 5, 1,700 for Unit 9, 1,000 for Unit 6 and 4,500 for Unit 12 (a mistake in the early press releases from the department of Conservation had the Unit 12 quota set at 1,500.

A special permit, obtained by application and a drawing, is needed to take an antlerless deer in a quota zone.

To apply for an antlerless deer permit, send a post card with your name, address, zip code, unit applied for and the serial number from your firearms deer permit to the Wildlife Divison, Missouri Department of Conservation, 2901 North Ten Mile Drive, Jefferson City, Missouri 65101.

Applications will be accepted until Friday, October 15. A drawing for permits will be held after that date.

In addition, any one Missouri resident owning a single tract of 80 or more acres of land and one additional member of his immediate household may request antlerless deer permits in those zones.

The request must be accompanied by all of the information above (except farmers hunting on their own land need not purchase a firearms deer permit), plus a copy of the real property tax receipt.

There are three basic methods of hunting deer--stand hunting (sitting 'em out), still hunting (easing along or stalking) and driving (a large noisy group chasing the deer to waiting standers).

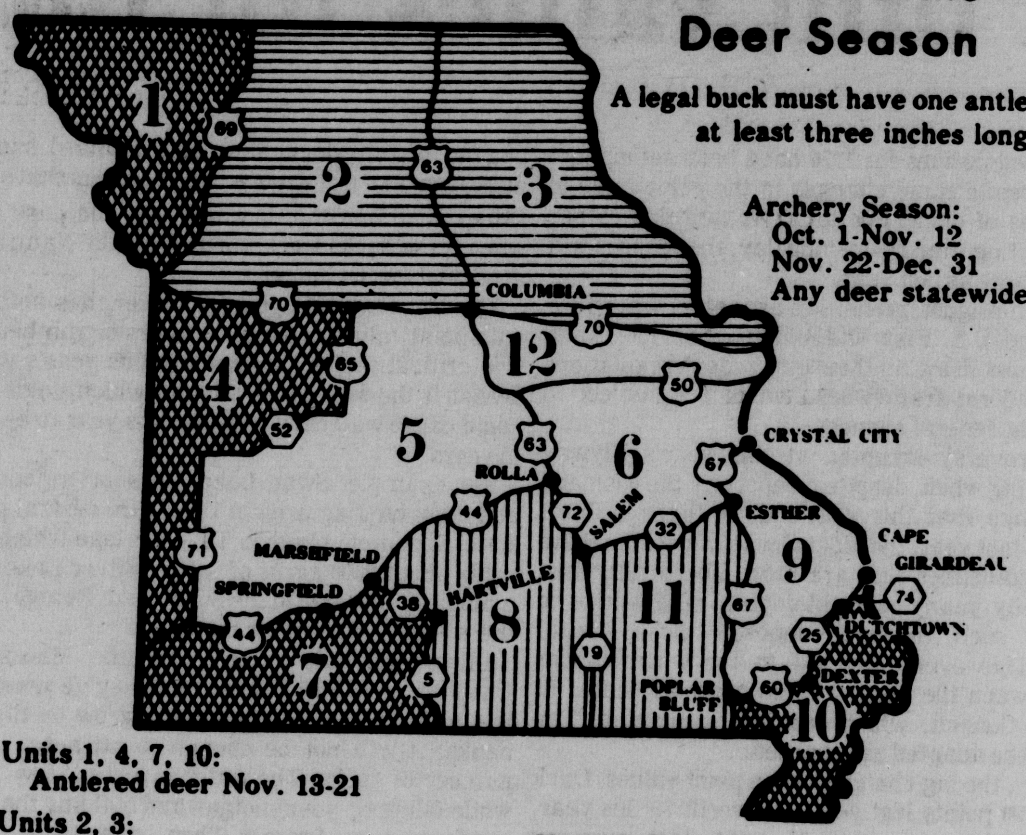

If the woods stay dry and therefore very noisy, still hunting will be difficult. Driving usually results in running shots at the deer, which are hard to hit, and it can be dangerous.

Somewhere between 90 and 95 per cent of all deer in Missouri are taken from stands. Tree stands are legal, but if you climb a tree, care must be taken not to fall and in the handling of firearms.

Archery turkey hunting provides challenge

Missouri bowhunters have a month-long try at bagging an elusive wild turkey.

The fall archery turkey season runs through Oct. 31.

Most archers are content to frustrate themselves by trying to bag a wiley white-tail deer with their limited-range weapons. To take a smaller, sharper-eyed and much more wary turkey seems to be almost an impossibility.

Yet, in 1975 a total of 52 big birds were felled by arrows. A total of 1,568 archers purchased the necessary fall turkey permit.

John B. Lewis, the Missouri Department of Conservation's foremost turkey expert, predicts hunters will be seeing plenty of turkeys this fall.

However, they may find hunting a bit tougher than last year because the birds are older and smarter.

The average adult hen produced 3.5 poults in 1975 and only 2.9 poults in 1976. Lewis speculated that early spring weather started the hens nesting, but late spring frosts and cold caused a high mortality in the young.

However, he added that for Missouri to maintain a "status quo" on its good turkey population, adult hens need to produce an average of 2.6 poults each.

So, the state has a good turkey population. How do you find them in the fall and then bag one with a bow and arrow?

Depending upon October's weather, Lewis suggests hunting the ridge tops and along the edges of fields. That's where most turkey foods are to be found.

The spring frosts heavily damaged the acorn crops in the bottoms and valleys, but left them along the ridges. Acorns are a favored turkey chow.

He added that the birds now are feeding on the large population of grasshoppers to be found along the edges of fields. The turkeys should stay with the grasshoppers as long as the jumpers are around.

Lewis added that an especially good bet is to hunt near ponds or water holes, particularly in the late evening hours, because of the drought.

Complete camouglage clothing is very important.

While spring gobbler hunting is a game of imitating a love-sick hen to bring a strutting gobbler close, fall hunting is a different ball game.

The most effective calls are those imitating a lost bird or a mother hen trying to collect her scattered brood.

The hen will use an almost continuous series of "clucks" to bring the birds back together. The young use the "lost hen" call, which is a series of seven or eight "yelps" or "caucks" followed by two or three spaced-out "clucks."

Lewis noted that "fall hunting is interesting, because what works on one bird won't work on another."

While spring hunters must take care not to call too much, the fall hunter cannot make that mistake.

In close, the challenge is to raise the bow, draw it and release the arrow without being spotted by the keen-eyed bird. Hunters are on their own on that one.

Quail season set

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — The Missouri quail season has been set with dates and bag limits identical to 1975. The season will open Nov. 10 and run through Jan. 15 with a daily limit of eight and possession limit of 16.

"We're in a drouth year," says Jack Stanford, quail biologist for the Department of Conservation. "But it's an agricultural drouth, not a bird drouth."

Stanford said quail have been spared with extremely high temperatures that, combined with drough, would have a heavy effect on nesting. According to Stanford, quail had a good early nest and a fair August next, somewhat hurt by drouth.

Overall, the production index — a figure which represents the average number of broods seen by observers statewide — is nine, compared to eight in 1975.

*Sites are proposals only, and land would be purchased only from willing sellers. Other proposals would benefit many counties. They include acquisition of unique natural areas such as prairie tracts or caves, and development of over 400 access sites on streams. People face conservation issue

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri is the hottest conservation story in the country and will be for the next month.

It's a story that won't have a finish until Nov. 2, amid the incredible confusion and dramatics of a Presidential general election.

Missourians will be voting on a state Constitutional amendment to finance an ambitious and inventive conservation program.

"This is the most important conservation happening of our lifetime," said G. Andy Runge, one of the state's four conservation commissioners.

Nov. 2 is the culmination of a decade of thought and planning, a decade that began with a disucssion between two conservationists and will end when each voter indicates whether he or she is willing to pay one eighth of one cent rax on each dollar of purchase.

The money from that fractional tax would be dedicated only to conservation programs and could be used for nothhing else. It would be administered by the Conservation Commission, which itself, was founded by initiative petition in 1936.

"We feel this effort is every bit as important as the original move to pull conservation out of politics," says Ed Stegner, executive secretary of the Citizens Committee for Coservation which collected the 200,000 signatures that put the amendment on the November ballot.

"That was a national first and so is this. Missourians always have been proud of their conservation program. We have a superbly rich outdoor state and we want to keep it that way."

The additional money would meet several prime goals. One is to offset the inroads on the rich outdoors Stegener talked about. Missouri has lost much of its outdoors and the pace is accelerating, not slowing.

In addition, the current conservation budget, limited largely to money collected as permit fees, is nearing the point where expenses will outstrip income and then the present program will begin to decline.

A third goal is to serve the outdoor needs of he people who do not hunt nor fish, but who enjoy conservation areas -- as backpackes, hikers, picknickers, birdwatchers and so forth. Surveys show about 70 per cent of all visitors to conservation areas (state forests, upland wildlife areas, waterfowl areas, etc.) are not hunting or fishing.

In some cases, the percentage is 100. Rockwoods Reservation near St. Louis has a quarter of a million visitors annually and Prairie chickens have been endangered in Missouri since the turn of the century, but never more than now. The birds are limited because of prairie habitat loss. More than 99 per cent of Missouri's tallgrass prairie has been destroyed. The proposed "Design for Conservation" would offer protection for rare and endangered species such as prairie chickens, as well as endangered habitats such as native prairie.

Design for Conservation

hunting and fishing is not allowed.

"Hunters and fishermen have supported conservation in Missouri for 40 years," says Carl Noren, director of the Conservation Department. "There is no way to overemphasize their contribution. They insisted on an end to woods burning and that led to the return of the forest wildlife.

"They've been uncomplaining and they have supportred professional conservation. They've beaten back political attempts to take over conservation and have been proud with us as Missouri has grown to be, certainly, one of the top several outdoor states in the nation.

"But you can ask only so much of them and we feel that others should help, especially since they use the public outdoor areas so heavily."

The tax, which would amount to a penny on eight dollars of purchase, would bring in about $20 million a year, roughly double the present conservation budget. The annual cost to a wage-earner is estimated about $3-4 or less than what a hunting or fishing permit costs.

There are three major areas where the additional money would go: public lands, services to Missourians, and management and research. The program is called "Design for Conservation." In future articles, we'll look at the three phases of the "Design."

Production indexes in northeast and southeast Missouri had risen from eight to 10. Northwest dropped from nine to seven, west central rose from seven to 11, east central from seven to eight. Southwest dropped from seven to six and the Ozark region from nine to eight.

New state forests would become available to Missourians under an amendment which will appear on the ballot in November. Conservationists say money from a proposed increase in the state sales tax would benefit wildlife and open new sites for nature enjoyment and outdoor recreation.

Missouri voters will find a wildlife conservation proposal on the ballot in November. Backers of the plan are asking for a small increase in the state sales tax to preserve wildlife habitat, fund research and protect unique outdoor areas.

Waterfowl hunters must know their birds before hunting

Know what you're shooting at and have a liberal bag: be unsure and you could be done for the day after one shot.

That's what modern-day duck hunting is all about and 1976 in Missouri and Illinois will be typically modern-day. Both states are on the point system, which means different species and sexes have point evaluations assigned to them.

The bird that brings the hunter's point total equivalent to or puts it over 100 points ends the day's hunt.

Illinois duck hunters will have a straight 50-day duck season, from Oct. 23 to Dec. 11

Missourians will have their first split duck season in history, with the first portion running Oct. 26-Dec. 5 and the second Dec. 2-Jan. 3.

The point evaluations for ducks in both states are:

100 points — Canvasback (and redheads closed along both sides of the Mississippi River from Alton, Ill., northward to the state boundaries).

70 points — Redheads, mallard hens, wood ducks, black ducks and hooded mergansers.

25 points — Mallard drakes, ring-necks, widgeon, buffleheads, goldeneyes, ruddy ducks, oldsquaws and all scoteres.

10 points — Pintails, all teal, gadwall, shovelers, scaup and all mergansers (except hooded mergansers).

There are two excellent devices to help hunters determine what species of ducks they are seeing or have bagged.

A new book entitled "Top Flight: Speed Index to Waterfowl," by John A. Ruthven and William Zimmerman (Charles Scribner's Sons, $5.95) is excellent. It is narrow enough to carry in a pocket and indexed according to size and color.

The other is a series of pocket-sized plastic impregnated cards called Waterfowl Iden-I-Cards, produced by Barcum House, of Wheaton, Ill. These cards are available for dabbling ducks, diving ducks and geese.

The Missouri goose season will open Oct. 26 and run through Dec. 9. Hunting in the Swan Lake Zone will coincide with that season, but will close when a quota of 25,000 geese are harvested.

The goose season in Missouri's Lower Mississippi River Zone is from Dec. 7 to Jan. 20.

The state-wide Illinois goose season opens Oct. 23 and continues through Dec. 31. Hunting in the Southern Illinois Zone, which includes Alexander, Jackson, Union and Williamson counties, opens Nov. 22 and runs through Jan. 20 or until a quota of 22,000 geese are taken.

Goose limits are complex and hunters should check specific area regulations before hunting.

Hunters to be notified by late October about TVA gun hunt requests

GOLDEN POND, Ky. — Applicants for the fall quota gun hunts for deer at TVA's Land Between The Lakes will be notified if they have been chosen to hunt by late October, according to resource management officials at the 170,000-acre public outdoor area.

The deadline for applying was September 1.

"All applicants will be notified by mail if they were or were not drawn," explained John Mechler, supervisor of wildlife at Land Betwen The Lakes. "We will not accept any type of inquiry -- phone calls, personal inquiries, or letters -- about the drawings until after November 1."

Hunters from throughout the Southeast applied for the hunts to be held in Kentucky November 17, 20, 22, and 29, and in Tennessee November 15, 18, 23, and 27. A special youth hunt will be held in both states November 13.

A total of 28,476 hunters have applied. There will be 7,750 drawn in Kentucky and 4,810 in Tennessee. Selections, areas, and dates are assigned by computer.

A Land Between The Lakes computer card permit is required for each hunter taking part in the gun hunts. Permits must be presented at the time the hunter checks into his or her area.

Each participant in the youth hunt must have all state required licenses and tags, computer card permit, and a Hunter Safety Certificate; these must be presented when checking in for the hunt. EACH youth must be accompanied by an adult who is at least 18 years of age while hunting. EACH adult accompanying a youth in the KENTUCKY hunt is required by state law to have a valid Kentucky hunting license and state deer permit.

Any reason why you should be pleased if the Frisco has a good year?

Our years are good when the economy of our service area is good.

Then we can spend more for goods, resulting in more employment for people all along the line. And that helps keep the economy good.

And we can buy better equipment that lets us improve our efficiency and capability.

That lets us continue to ship in the goods you want and move out the goods you produce at the most economical cost of any form of transportation. And that's good for the economy.

So we profit from a good economy and, in return, that economy profits from us.

Which means when we have a good year, it's a good year where you live.

And that seems a good reason to be pleased.

We're running for you.

Canada geese landing in Missouri are a common sight during the fall, especially at Swan Lake Refuge near Sumner. Goose managers have succeeded in bringing the post-season flock of the birds, which nest on Hudson's Bay, to 200,000 and also raising the quota allowed hunters in the Swan Lake zone to 25,000 birds, a real wildlife management success story. (Department of Conservation photo)

Goose flock now healthy

COLUMBIA— Between the idea and its reality lies 2,000 miles, a blinding Arctic blizzard and seven long years ...

The eastern priairie population of Canada geese, the flock that migrates through Missouri, finally has reached a goal set in 1968 of 200,000 birds after the fall hunting season.

Waterfowl biologists from Manitoba, through Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri; set the goal of an increased flock because of increased hunting pressure.

But no sooner had they made the decision than a terrible late spring blizzard in the spring of 1969 wiped out the year's hatch on Hudson's Bay.

It takes at least three years for such breeding collapse to heal itself and the best way to do it was to ask hunters to tighten their belts, to cut back limits and seasons drastically.

The cutbacks were severe. Minnesota went from a 70-day season to nine days. Missouri's Swan Lake zone quota dropped from 25,000 to 14,000 birds at low ebb.

Last season, for the first time, the quota returned to 25,000. It was a success. The post-season flock topped 200,000.

So hunters at Swan Lake once again will have a 25,000 quota. The season opens October 26. "There's no reason to think we'll drop below 200,000 after the season this year either," says Ken Babcock, waterfowl biologist for the Department of Conservation.

Babcock, who spends part of each summer on the bleak Canada goose nesting grounds around Hudson's Bay, says the 1976 nest season was at least average.

"In fact, instead of severe cold weather, the area was plagued with a heat wave just after the birds started to hatch," he says.

"Hudson's Bay had the highest temperatures in Canada. Some blue and snow geese actually suffered gosling mortality from the heat -- maybe because they nest in very high humidity areas. We didn't see any evidence of mortality among the Canada geese."

So an experiment that was derailed by bad weather now is firmly on the track and running smoothly.

And Missouri hunters, who made the sacrifice necessary to get it there, now are picking up the benefits.

Ford cleared of funds misuse

Associated Press Writer

President Ford won a clean bill of health today from the Watergate special prosecutor in a probe of allegations that Ford had misued political campaign funds while a member of Conress.

"The matter has now been closed and counsel for the President has been so advised," special prosecutor Charles Ruff said in a two-page statement handed out to reporters.

The White House announced that Ford will hold a news conference at 7:30 p.m. EDT today to discuss the special prosecutor's inquiry and answer quesions on other subjects. It will be the President's first formal news conference since Feb. 17.

Word that Ford had been cleared of the charges came about the same time that Ford was rolling up his sleeve at the White House to receive a swine flu shot administered by his personal physician, Dr. William Lukash.

The President's inoculation attracted special attention in view of reports that more than a score of elderly persons have died after being given the shots. Federal officials at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., say there is no evidence to link the deaths with the vaccinations, but several states have suspended their inoculation programs, at least temporarily.

Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter, meanwhile, was flying to New York to begin another three-day stint of campaigning that will take him to Detroit, Kansas City and several cities in Ohio.

Ford himself ended a two-day campaign visit to the New York-New Jersey area Wednesday, and the vice-presidential candidates, Democrat Walter F. Mondale and Republican Bob Dole, were heading for Houston, Tex., where they will meet in a nationally televised debate on Friday night.

The announcement by Ruff that Ford had been cleared of all suspicion in connection with the misuse of campaign funds was certain to provide a lift to the President's effort to win the Nov. 2 election.

But there remained another potentially troublesome inquiry, also by Ruff's office, into claims that Ford, while House minority leader, may have discussed with members of President Richard M. Nixon's White House staff ways of blocking an early investigation into the Watergate affair.

And the Washington Post reported that the Democratic National Committee plans to file a complaint with the Federal Election Commission about Ford's alleged use of aides and Cabinet members, who earn government salaries, for campaign duties.

Ruff's statement said the investigation of Ford's campaign funds originated with charges by an individual, whom Ruff did not identify, that political contributions from certain unnamed unions had been transmitted to political committees in Kent County, Michigan, Ford's home district, with the understanding that they would be passed on to Ford for his personal use.

Ruff said the individual took the charges to an FBI agent. Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi was notified by FBI Director Clarence Kelley on July 13, and ordered the case given to the special prosecutor for investigation.

Ford, at each stop on Wednesday, told his audiences that Carter wants to raise their taxes but that a Ford administration will cut taxes. At White Plains, N.Y., Ford said, "I say the middle-income taxpayer is already overtaxed, overburdened and underrepresented."

And he signed a bill extending the federal revenue-sharing program for 3½ years at a projected cost of $25.5 billion. The money goes to state and local governments.

In a statement issued in Plains, Carter said, "I am pleased that Mr. Ford has decided to sign the bill." But, he said, "I do regret that so little else has been done by this administration to ease the plight of our cities and to help restore a true federalism in our system of government."

He said Ford had vetoed legislation that would have provided needed aid to cities and states.

Meanwhile, the Ford administration announced an increase in the production loan rates for wheat and feed grains after months of rejecting farmers' pleas for such increases.

There were indications the move could aid the Ford campaign in grain-growing states where the race with Carter is close, but Agriculture Department officials denied any political motivation.

Pemiscot sheriff is ousted

CARUTHERSVILLE

"We're tired of being the cesspool of the Bootheel in the area of law enforcement," said Pemiscot County Presiding Judge D. J. Meredith, following the ouster Wednesday of former sheriff Thad O. Shelly.

"We are sick to death of our type of law enforcement in Pemiscot County," Meredith said. "We are going to do everything we can to improve it."

Charles Albert Farris, was appointed as interim sheriff until Dec. 31, when the winner of the Nov. 2, general election is to take office.

Farris, former sheriff Clyde Orton and County Treasurer John Turnage have all indicated intensions to wage a write-in campaign for the post.

Shelly was appointed to the office after Orton was ousted in 1971 for allowing widespread gambling and liquor violations in the county.

On Friday, Circuit Judge William Ragland reportedly entered an order vacating the sheriff's office for Shelly's failure to post a $50,000 bond, first ordered Sept. 3. At the same time the judge stayed the execution of the order until 4 p.m. Tuesday to allow the sheriff time to apply to the Missouri Court of Appeals for a writ of prohibition. The judge's order stated that if no writ was granted, the county court was ordered to appoint a new sheriff

Motorist plunges into river

A Steele man was killed Wednesday in an accident at the Cottonwood Point ferry landing in Pemiscot County and nine persons were injured in six separate accidents on area roads, the highway patrol reported today.

The patrol said the accident at the ferry landing has not yet been ruled a traffic accident.

The patrol said the accident occurred at 10:45 p.m. when Elmer E. Biggs, 60, of Steele, traveling east in a pickup truck, ran off the ferry landing into 30 feet of water. The body and vehicle were recovered about two hours later by the Blytheville, Ark. Citizens Band and Rescue Squad. The body was taken to Pemiscot County Medical Center at Hayti and then moved to German-Aumon Funeral Home in Steele.

A one-vehicle accident at 5:30 p.m., six miles east of Fredericktown on a county road, caused serious injuries to the driver and his brother.

The accident occurred when Richard Allen Cathey, 18, of Patton, lost control of his eastbound car on loose gravel. The car ran off the road and struck a tree. Cathey and his brother, Robert H. Cathey, 17, were taken to Madison County Hospital in Fredericktown with serious injuries.

Two persons were injured -- one seriously-- in a collision at 6:45 p.m., three miles north of Senath on Highway 25.

The patrol said a southbound pickup truck with a cotton trailer, driven by Winfred Harold Tackeberry, 46, of Kennett, attempted to make a left turn and pulled into the path of a car driven north by Jimmy Allen Winkle, 21, of Senath.

Bond tells teachers

Amendment 2 would severely hurt schools

Gov. Christopher S. Bond told members of the Sikeston Community Teachers Association that the passage of Amendment Two in the Nov. 2 general election would deal a heavy blow to state finances and that one of the biggest losers would be education.

Bond spoke to teachers from Sikeston and other schools at the Sikeston High School cafetorium shortly before appearing at a Republican Party barbecue attended by an estimated 1,000 people. The barbecue was held at the National Guard Armory.

Bond told the teachers that passage of the amendment, which would eliminate sales taxes from food and prescription drugs, would cost the state $140 million and local governments $40 million — money that would have to be recovered through a broad range of new taxes.

The amendment is being billed as a tax reform measure. Bond said one state official, he did not identify him, says passage of the amendment would provoke the kind of crisis needed to obtain tax reform in the state.

Bond said his answer is that the state does not need government by crisis.

If tax reform is needed, Bond said it should not be done in a system struggling to survive.

The big losers, if the bill should pass, would be education, mental health and other social programs, Bond said. He told the teachers state funds are legally committed to other areas and funding in the education and social areas are the only ones that can be cut.

The state financial assistance program could not stand that kind of shock, Bond said.

The $18 million would have to be recovered through a broad range of taxes, Bond said, adding that he does not know just which the Legislature would accept.

Taking a swipe at his Democratic opponent, Joseph Teasdale, without mentioning his name, Bond said the state could not make up the loss by taxing business without driving businesses and jobs out of the state. Teasdale has said he would make up the loss by raising business taxes.

He said some states have learned that their high tax rates have cost them jobs. Other states are cutting their taxes and trying to lure business back, he said.

Bond later told the crowd at the barbecue that Teasdale's only promise so far has been to raise taxes, something he called a "strange concept" in campaigning.

Bond told the teachers that he looks forward with hope and optimism to five areas of education, including early childhood and parent education, compentancy examinations, vocational education, consumer economics education and revision of the state funds formula.

Bond said there is a need to work with parents to help develop the potential of children before they attend school. He pointed to studies showing that the child learns most quickly in his very early years, before he attends school.

He added that high school may be the place to train young people in parenthood, and

Stoddard deputy to join Dexter police department

BLOOMFIELD — The Stoddard County Sheriff's Department is losing a deputy to the troubled Dexter Police Department, a spokesman for the sheriff's department announced today.

Deputy Steve Fish who has been with the department for about a year and a half will be leaving his position with the county Friday.

Bernie police officer Larry Hampton has resigned his position to take the one being vacated by Fish.

The spokesman said there is no problem within the sheriff's department or within the Bernie police department and that the shuffling of personnel among the different police agencies in the county were due to personal reasons of each officer.

Fish could not be reached for comment this morning.

This will not be the first time personnel has shifted from one police department in the county to another. Present Dexter Police Chief Jim Teeters was a Stoddard County deputy before accepting the job in Dexter.

Bob Barker now a deputy sheriff in Stoddard County worked for awhile with the Dexter Police Department before quitting to join the sheriff's department.

Barker, along with Deputy Jim Ross, are two deputies named specifically by members or former members of the Dexter police as the ones they were ordered to stay away from by a superior.

Dexter has recently had a problem keeping police officers with three resigning during the past several weeks due to internal problems. Two other officers have been suspended.

DEATH OF A CHILEAN

Someone murdered Orlando Otelier — brutally, by a bomb attached to his car — while he was driving to work in Washington, D.C.

Mr. Otelier was a person of some political prominence. A one time Chilean ambassador to the United States, he was later minister of defense under the Marxist regime of Salvador Allende. Since Allende was overthrown in 1973, Otelier has been a bitter opponent of the present military junta which rules Chile. So it was immediately assumed, apparently by just about everyone, that it was the junta which ordered and engineered Otelier's murder. And it has sparked a great hue and cry among those opposed to the junta, blaming it for the atrocity and calling for the U.S. to cease all support for such an allegedly murderous government.The whole Left, in fact, has seized upon the crime as a cause celebre.

Which certainly makes us wonder a bit who it really was who killed Mr. Otelier. Keep in mind that so far there is no proof of any kind that the Chilean Government was responsible. That is supposed to be taken as so obvious that no proof is necessary. Why then, we ask, would the junta be so stupid as to invite such condemnation? Couldn't Chile's rulers have figured out for themselves that blowing Otelier up with a bomb would not exactly improve their image in the U.S.?

Otelier's "friends" might figure it that way. Perhaps they did him in themselves. After all, what is the sacrifice of one man if his death can contribute to the cause he himself believed in?

We're not claiming that is necessarily the answer in this case; but if so, it would not be the first political crime committed by one faction in order to put the blame on the other. Politics can sometimes be an extremely cynical business.

All we are saying is that until the evidence is in, and the guilty party cleared established, we think that fair-minded Americans ought to withhold judgment.

BLUE RIBBON STUDY OF MEDICAID
From The Raleigh, N.C. News And Observer

It turns out that Senator Frank E. Moss, of Utah, achieved mixed results from his unusual efforts to pinpoint waste and abuse in the nation's 15-billion-dollar-a-year medicaid program of health care for the poor. The happiest outcome of his project would be a more thorough and dispassionate study, something on the order of a presidential blue ribbon inquiry, to look beyond Moss's findings.

Staff investigators of Moss's Senate Committee on Aging uncovered dramatic examples of unnecessary treatment and fraudulent billing in many of the 600 storefront clinics known as "medicaid mills" in New York City.

Behind these sensational abuses, however, is a prevailing pattern of mediocre health care that is the best available to the hundreds of thousands who are the pawns of the medicaid mills. And the mills themselves are not uniformly run to gouge the government. Three of Moss's staff investigators, dressed in shabby attire and armed with fake medicaid eligibility cards, were arrested at clinics in Detroit—and would have been charged with fraud themselves under normal circumstances.

Those who are most anxious to reform the Medicaid program have no difficulty highlighting examples of outrageous waste and abuse. It is harder to identify the degree of legitimate, if not always high quality, care rendered to people who genuinely need it and are entitled to it under the law. The sensational aspects of this sometimes seedy and oftentimes sad business can best be used to improve the program instead of merely damning it.

The basic question posed is one of separating exploitation of the poor and the Government from medicaid services. The traditional fee-for-service delivery method, with different parties getting the service and paying the fee, is at the heart of the matter. And that isn't going to be rendered ethical or modified at many of the medicaid mills until a more thorough and dispassionate review of the program has been made.

IT SEEMS INCREDIBLE

The landslide victory of Gov. Carter for the Democratic nomination for President of the United States seems incredible. Sometimes people who have been familiar with politics wonder if they are dreaming, and if it did really happen in the America of today.

Carter was born and raised on a farm near Plains, Georgia, a town approximately the size of Madison in Monroe County. His family was not wealthy, but it was a prosperous one as farming goes. He applied for and won appointment to the U.S. Navl Academy, then served several years as a naval officer. He returned to his home village and took over the management of the Carter farm and its peanut warehouse after the death of his father. He tried for public office and failed the first time. He finally became Governor of Georgia, but had no national fame.

He set his sights on the nomination for President, evolved a brilliant plan for taking his candidacy to the people of the nation, not just to the governors, mayors and political big-wigs.

In the primaries and at the national convention, he won "going away".

Most of us remember that as youths we were told any American boy could become President.

Here, as in the case of Harry Truman, is modern evidence this is still true in America, because Jimmy Carter seems almost certainly destined to be the next President.

It's a modern Alger story of a boy who rose from small beginnings to the supreme heights of American government.

THE PRISON DEAL

The Bond Administration's handling of the aborted real estate deal for a proposed new prison site south of Kansas City may very well be an unfortunate aberration. But for the Republican Administration that has portrayed itself as a paragon of efficiency, it surely must be something of an embarrassment—particular so since it comes in the midst of the Governor's re-election campaign.

What happened, according to a study of the pertinent documents by Louis J. Rose of the Post-Dispatch staff, is that the state agreed to pay $165,000, or 14 per cent, more than two formal appraisals had suggested as the value of the 261-acre site. On top of that, the appraisals were not even made until after the sales contract stipulating a $1,293,000 purchase price had been signed. All of which prompted State Auditor Lehr, a Democrat, to comment that the appraisals, a necessary preliminary to business-like negotiations, appeared to be something of an "afterthought."

Another problem with the deal can be written off as coincidence, we suppose. That is, that the person who handled the negotiations for the state is a former Jackson County Republican Chairman and that one of the beneficiaries, had the deal been consumated, was the husband of a prominent Kansas City Republican. But if the state loses its $75,000 earnest money now that the Governor has abandoned plans to put the prison on the site, then the business judgments involved in the transaction surely were less than acceptable. The Governor killed the $16,000,000 project after widespread local opposition had developed.

Why the state failed to act with greater prudence is a question. But at the very least the deal as it stands is touched with unhappy coincidence, poor judgment and perhaps bureaucratic error. In the absence of evidence of more sinister motivations, these attributes of the affair suggest that the Bond Administration is only human after all.

Congress reported spending $1,349,412 for foreign travel by members during 1975, but a higher total was reported by the Washington Post.

Congressional Quarterly noted that while the State Department figures are more complete than those reported by Congress, even they do not show the true cost of foreign travel. They do not include a major item—the Air Force transportation provided for many Congressional trips.

WASHINGTON— Everyone is asking what happened to President Ford and how he suddenly lost his momentum. I think I can tell you.

One day last week Mr. Ford's campaign manager walked out to the Rose Garden to discuss some business and found the gate open. He rushed back into the White House and shouted "The President's gone! Who left the Rose Garden gate open?"

None of his aides would admit he had.

"I gave specific orders," the campaign manager said, "that the President was not to be let out of the Rose Garden until after the election."

"He was awful itchy to get out of the garden," an aide said. "I heard him tell Ron Nessen he planned to tunnel out under the fence as soon as Congress went home."

"Oh, my God," the manager said. "He was doing so well in the polls. Our campaign strategy was working perfectly. The only time the press could get near him was when he was signing bills. Now he's going to blow the whole thing."

One of the aides said defensively, "He's running for President of the United States, and he has a right to campaign if he wants to. Besides, it gets cold in the Rose Garden at night."

"I don't care how cold it gets. Look what happened when he ran in the primaries against Ronald Reagan. He was leading by 20 points. Then he started campaigning and hit his head against his helicopter every time he got off the plane. The White Houe is the only safe place for Gerry Ford."

"The President can handle himself," a loyal aide retorted. "He hasn't been in politics for 37 years without knowing what to say."

The campaign manager wasn't convinced. "Does anyone know where he went?"

"I heard him say he was going out to California to debate foreign policy with Jimmy Carter."

"Oh, my God. I told him not to debate with Jimmy Carter. The man gets under Ford's skin and will make Gerry blurt out anything."

"You don't give the President enough credit," an aide retorted. "He's well versed in foreign affairs and has had daily briefings from Henry Kissinger. When it comes to a debate on our policy overseas he'll make mincemeat of Carter."

The campaign manager said, "It's too much of a gamble. The President has everything to lose and nothing to gain by debating Carter. He promised me he'd stay in the Rose Garden. I'd like to find the guy who unlocked the gate."

"Earl Butz was out there last night saying goodby. Maybe he did it."

The campaign manager said, "Well, we've got to get him back. Call Air Force One and demand they immediately return to Washington."

"It's too late. The President's plane has already arrived in San Francisco. The debate is about to start any minute."

"Oh, my God," the campaign manager said as he turned on the set.

For an hour no one said anything. Then Max Frankel of the New York Times asked the question about the Soviet sphere of influence in the Eastern European countries.

The campaign manager put his hands over his eyes. "Here it comes."

Sure enough, the President blew it by saying there was no Soviet domination in East Europe and mentioned Yugoslavia, Romania and Poland as being free countries.

Everyone in the room said "Oh, my God" in unison.

"All right, wise guys," the campaign manager said. "Was I right about opening the gate to the Rose Garden or wasn't I?"

It was a rhetorical question to which nobody bothered to reply.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Adjournment Cans Renegotiation Board

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON— Just as German submarines preferred to strike at dawn or dusk, the special interests have found that the best time to torpedo legislation is during the end-of-the-season rush.

Then the legislators are so impatient to adjourn Congress and head for home that they don't often bother to scrutinize the fine print. The action is also too fast for the public to follow.

Earlier this month, Congress closed down for the 1976 season, and the smoke is now beginning to clear from the adjournment rush. Many of the departing congressmen may be surprised to learn that they left the Federal Renegotiation Board on the shoals.

This agency should be the scourge of the big defense contractors. Potentially, it could recover hundreds of millions in excess profit that the munitions makers had squeezed from the taxpayers.

This has made members of Congress apprehensive about the Renegotiation Board. Every weapons system is supported by a formidable lobby, composed of the military brass who believe in it, the contractors who manufacture the component parts, the workers who put them together and the congressmen whose district enjoy the economic benefits.

The bond between the congressmen and the contractors has been made all the tighter by a steady flow of campaign contributions. Many congressmen, therefore, support the contractors who pick the taxpayers' pockets rather than the agency that guards against the corporate pickpockets.

Democrats and Republicans alike have conspired to limit the powers of the Renegotiation Board. But Sen. William Proxmire, D.-Wis., a foe of Pentagon waste, has sought to strengthen the board. He sponsored a bill that would have made the board a permanent agency and would have given it tough subpoena and inspection powers over contractors.

The Proxmire measure would also have wiped out special loopholes intended to protect the oil industry and would have increased the penalties upon the profiteers.

It was awkward for any member of Congress to oppose these reforms in the open. On the Senate floor, even the oil industry's most staunch friend in the Senate, Russell Long, D.-La., agreed to hold hearings.

Subsequently, the reform measure was skillfully steered through the House by Rep. Joseph Minish, D.-N.J. But Long never got around to scheduling the Senate hearings he had promised.

In desperation, Proxmire sent a private, urgent "Dear Colleague" letter to his fellow senators. It's against the rules of the Senate for one senator to disparage another or to question his motives. So Proxmire, complying with senatorial courtesy, accused Long of welshing in the kindliest language. He noted delicately that Long "had not gotten around" to the bill.

But in firmer tones, Proxmire urged that the bill be taken up in the closing days of Congress. There could be billions of the taxpayers' money at stake, he felt. For a brief time, it appeared that he might marshal enough votes to pass the reforms.

Then Long, exercising his prerogatives as Senate Finance Committee chairman, blocked the bill. Rather than risk letting it pass, he simply permitted the entire board to die as a federal agency.

As of now, the Renegotiation Board continues to function on old cases. But theoretically, it doesn't even exist. It has funds to keep it going into next year. But at least until Congress can reinstitute it in January, all its actions are subject to challenge.

The armaments industry, meanwhile has won another victory over the taxpayers.

GOODBYE HARLEY: In the past, we have written about a powerful but almost anonymous Senate aid named Harley Dirks. From the backrooms of the Senate Appropriations Committee, he controlled the flow of billions to the Health, Education and Welfare Department.

He used his powers to gut a dynamic HEW investigation of Medicaid and Medicare frauds. Disregarding the clear conflict, he also personally handled the budget of an HEW agency in which his wife was an official.

We also reported a few weeks ago that he rigged up a phony record to make it appear that formal hearings had been held on HEW appropriations. The published testimony, it turned out, was merely written answers submitted to the committee.

This proved to be the final straw for patient Sen. Warren Magnuson, D.-Wash., who is Dirks' subcommittee chairman. A few days ago, Magnuson quietly accepted Dirks' resignation. At Dirks' office, a secretary told us he was on vacation and didn't want to talk with us.

WATCH ON WASTE: The General Accounting Office has completed a secret study of the federal flood insurance program, which spends millions to insure communities against flood damage.

In theory, the idea is sound. But our sources say the costly insurance has been issued to cover hillsides and other areas totally out of reach of any flood short of Noah's.

The GAO study takes a harsh view of waste in the federal program. It is expected to be released within 50 days unless efforts to weaken or delay it are successful.

Inside Labor
By Victor Riesel

Candid Letter:

Sen. Jim Buckley tells White Unionists he'll fight 'Reverse Discrimination' quotas

NEW YORK — If bluntness can be alchemized into ballots, Conservative Sen. Jim Buckley has whipped himself up quite a campaign here. Acting on the theory that, in their hearts, many white workers believe they are being put upon by black and Hispanic communities in "reverse discrimination" on the job, Buckley has written directly to the labor chiefs declaring that he is their true champion.

It may surprise his Democratic liberal opponent, Pat Moynihan, in this all-star senatorial race, to learn that seven thousand local officials have just received a letter from Buckley starting with "Dear Union Leader."

Buckley does lay it on the line in this uptight sensitive city -- much of which resembles the Berlin I saw not long after the 1945 Armageddon. Construction work is as low as an Antarctic thermometer. Journeymen craftsmen, no longer labor's elite, have agreed to slash their wages 25 per cent on certain projects. Unemployment even in the rarest building skills runs up to 60 and 70 per cent.

Competition for work is razor sharp among the predominantly white craftsmen members of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades city and state departments. And, adding to the racial tension, the federal courts are zeroing in on the local union membership – with rulings directing the absorption of large numbers of black and Hispanic workers (the latter mostly of Puerto Rican origin).

For a while now the morning mail has brought Sen. Buckley's letter to the desks of hardhat leaders.

"I am the only member of Congress not only to denounce the 'quota system,' of reverse discriminatin in hiring and education, but also to do something about it," writes Buckley.

Then the Conservative-Republican Senator rams home his racial point – still one of the major issues, though now as undiscussed in the marketplace as once upon an ancient time was the private lust of national candidates.

"Unless something is done to stop 'quota' hiring, the seniority rule could well be declared illegal," Buckley says. "My office has been working closely with Local 28, of the Sheet Metal Union in New York, to stop this kind of discrimination."

This local has often been cited as a violator of the rights of minority workers and of affirmative action policies.

Buckley refers to his "bill S. 3069, the Anti-Discrimination Act of 1976" and he avers that it "would eliminate 'goals and timetables' of affirmative action programs, thereby ensuring that hiring and promotion is based on merit, not on quotas. Reverse discrimination, which has worked against so many workers in New York state, has hurt their families as well."

Then Buckley makes his candid bid by adding that, "with your help and the help of the members of your union, I will be able to carry on the fight for six more years. I hope you will be able to bring this letter to the attention of your members."

These letters have been dispatched for weeks now. Some of them have seeped down. This is strong political stuff. It goes down hard. It has antagonized black and Puerto Rican community leaders.

There is an unreported civil war here. At stake are hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of construction and thousands of jobs.

Who does get hired once the wage rates are set? And the money is borrowed. Who will get the contracts? Far more than merely the story of angry racial forces arrayed on the sidewalks of New York, this is the saga of a hundred urban centers. And more than just Local 28 sheet metal workers is involved.

For example, just the other week federal Judge Charles Tenney ruled that two New York City Operating Engineers Locals, 14 and 15, must substantially increase their black and Puerto Rican membership. Substantial means substantial all right -- up to 36 per cent nonwhite and Hispanic members. And in five years.

For Local 14 this will be more than a 1,200 per cent increase. And for Local 15 -- a 550 per cent jump.

And the judge has permanently restrained the locals from any action which would keep out blacks or Puerto Ricans or discriminate against them in unioin membership practices, job referrals and job training.

There you have it. An unpredecented daring first serve in thsi industrial state. Pat Moynihan's backhand will prove that soon enough. This is no love match. It's the toughest – and most significant– competition around.

Ancestors of the American Indians, history shows, moved from Asia into North America about 20,000 B.C. and were using stone tools and fire.

'Wizard' a rainbow of fantasy and fun

By ANN O'LEARY
WOMEN'S EDITOR

For a while last night, I really thought I was in Kansas ... and in the Emerald City ... and in Munchkinland. It was dress rehearsal for the Little Theatre's production of "The Wizard of Oz," which opens at 8 p.m. tonight at the Sikeston Activity Center.

There are a lot of good things about the show — the cast performances, make-up and costumes, to mention a few. The stage sets are outstanding.

"We hope the audience will be sort of dazzled by our stage sets," comments Vivian Boyer, director. Not to worry. They'll be dazzled all right.

And the Yellow Brick Road will be paved with laughter as the cast leads the audience through the play. Rebecca Perrin of Sikeston is a believable Dorothy, and her vocals are very good. As the Scarecrow, Lee Crites is a delight and remains in character the entire time he is on stage. The performances of Jim Wenneker, the Cowardly Lion, and Randy Couch, the Tin Man, add another dimension of comedy to the cast.

The make-up crew gets a pat on the back, not only for a job well done, but for making each character look distinct. Even the three witches having a coffee klatch are distinguishable from one another.

The Little Theatre and director Vivian Boyer are to be congratulated for staging such an ambitious undertaking as "The Wizard of Oz." The cast of 55 is a large one, but the director has managed to keep all of them, including the energetic Munchkins, working together.

Veteran performers in the cast, in order of appearance, are: Lee Beck, Bruce Eby, Rebecca Perrin, Paula Smith, (wicked witch), Lee Crites, Randy Couch, Jim Wenneker, Peggy Borgsmiller, Francis Schumacher III, Jan Barkett, Karen Beck, Diane Dillon, and Debbie Schuhart.

Newcomers to the Little Theatre stage are Teresa Blunt, Dale Frame, Gary Clark, Sandra April, Bonnie Newton — (Good Witch), Julie Cowell, Janet Hahs, Tonia Thompson, Julie Potashnick, Bill Pothast (Wizard), Weymouth Reed, Lynne Thornton, Benita Beck, Donna Carr, Lori McPhail, Dana Voelker, Mike Chegwidden, Larry Beck, Phillips Chegwidden and Chris Thornton.

Munchkins include: Heather Thornton, Brooke Anne Colley, Teresa Belt, Lisa Carlisle, Robin Wilson, Kim Castleberry, Pam Carroll, Julie Carlisle, Lori Newton, Beth Weber, Mary-Ellen Vanover, Donna Griffin, Cathy Reed, David Reed, Chipper Thornton, Bryan Dillon, Gina Walker, Michelle Foster, Elizabeth Malcolm, Cindy Reynolds, Pam Powell, Terri Van Doren and Julie Potashnick.

Citizens of the Emerald City of Oz are Betty Jane Stewart, Carla Walden, Teresa Belt, Robin Wilson, Kim Castleberry, Mary-Ellen Vanover, Donna Griffin, Pam Carroll, Connie Thompson, Rissa Thompson, and Cindy Reynolds.

Another good thing about this production, which opens the Little Theatre's 17th season, is that if goblins prevent you from going to see it tonight, you can go Friday or Saturday night at 8 p.m., or catch the Sunday matinee at 2 p.m. Go early for tickets, because seating is limited.

Then sit back, and before you know it, you'll be in Kansas, and there will be a twister...

I.Q. doesn't make a doctor

Dear Ann Landers: Your admonition to "Reno, Nevada" to remember that "fifty per cent of the doctors now practicing medicine were in the bottom half of their class" was misleading. If you believe that those who graduated in the upper fifty per cent turned out to be better doctors -- you're wrong.

I'm a medical student who heard you speak at Duke University and thought you were great. That answer wasn't what I expected from you, Ann Landers.

From what I've seen here at Duke (and Harvard before that) I can tell you those academic geniuses often make better research guys than practicing physicians. It's one thing to be brilliant in the lab and another thing to be a compassionate, dedicated doctor.

These days, when it is especially difficult to get into ANY medical school, I've often thought what a pity it is that so many potentially first-rate physicians are being excluded because the emphasis is so heavily slanted toward the academic. Of course a competent physician must know his stuff when it comes to the basic sciences, but the human qualities -- maturity, stability, a sense of dedication and caring -- don't come through in the test and they are extremely important in the making of a fine physician. Sign me – Durham, N.C.

Dear N.C.: Your concept is right on. And guess who is putting it into practice? The People's Republic of China! They pick their medical students precisely along the lines you mentioned. Academic achievement counts for less than 50 per cent.

Dear Ann: I am married to a man who eats too much, drinks too much and smokes too much. I've fought all those battles and lost, so now I'm writing about a problem I've never seen discussed in your column.

Every night Charles goes to sleep with radio earphones plugged into his ears. He claims he can't sleep without them and even takes the stupid things along when we go on vacation.

Frequently during the night the earplugs fall out and scare me to death with the 3:00 a.m. news or the sudden blast of a rock band. Charles never hears a thing because he's snoring his head off.

I need my rest and would like to know what I can do about this. Some nights I get so mad I feel like strangling him with the earphone cords. Please don't suggest that I sleep elsewhere. We have no spare room .Thanks for whatever help you can give me. -- Baggy-Eyed In Suburbia

Dear B.E.: Do you have adhesive tape in the house? Well, use it to secure the earphones to your husband's head -- and get some rest, honey.

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing for my two younger sisters as well as myself. They are 11 and 13. I am 14. We all have the same problem.

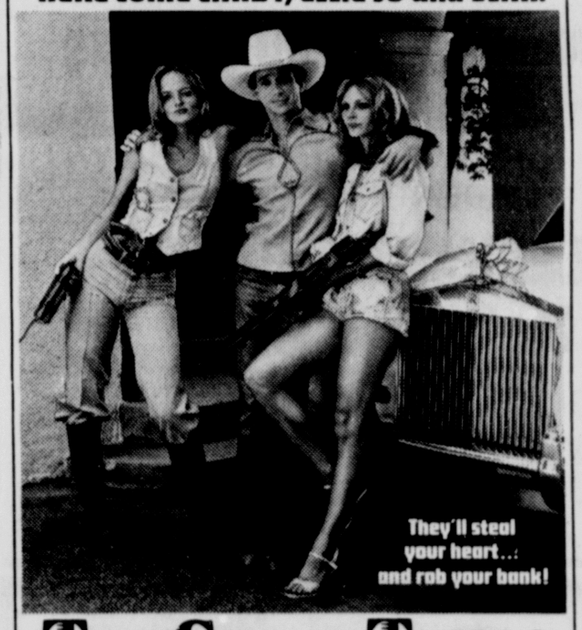

Two weeks ago Dad and Mom split. They are not divorced but they are going to be soon. When people call on the phone and ask for Dad, I don't know what to tell them. Mom doesn't like it when I say, "He doesn't live here anymore."

Can you solve this problem? -- From P.A.

Dear P.A.: Surely your mother knows where your dad is living. When someone calls asking for him, whoever answers the phone should give the caller that information. Nothing more need be said.

"Sexual freedom" presents a difficult decision for teenagers and their parents. 1 package active dry yeast
2½ cups warm water (105° to 115°)
1 cup instant nonfat dry milk
2 tablespoons sugar
4 cups all-purpose flour

a) Stir yeast, water, dry milk and sugar in 2½ quart crock or non-metallic bowl until yeast is dissolved. Stir in flour gradually until a smooth batter forms. Let stand loosely covered in warm place, 3 to 5 days. Stir down batter occasionally. Store loosely covered in refrigerator.

b) Replace exact amount of starter used for each recipe by stirring equal amounts of homogenized milk and flour back into starter. (For example, replace 1 cup starter with ½ cup homogenized milk and ½ cup flour). Let stand loosely covered until it bubbles, overnight. Stir down. Each time this process is repeated, the starter becomes more active and develops a more sour flavor. Note: if stored as much as two to three weeks between usings, just pour off the watery layer on top and replace following procedure in (b).

2. SOURDOUGH BREAD STICKS

1 cup instant nonfat dry milk
1 cup warm water (105° to 115°)
1 cup Sourdough Starter (see Recipe No. 1)
2 cups all-purpose flour
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons sugar
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ to 1 cup all-purpose flour
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted

a) Mix dry milk, water, Sourdough Starter and 2 cups flour in non-metallic bowl; cover loosely. Let stand in warm place until mixture is coarse and bubbly, at least 8 hours.

b) Mix oil, salt, sugar and baking soda into sourdough mixture. Stir in enough of the remaining flour to make dough easy to handle. Knead dough lightly on well-floured board, about 2 minutes.

c) Roll dough into rectangle, 15 x 10 inches, on well-floured board. Cut into fifteen 1-inch strips. Roll each strip into even round strand, about 14 inches long. Double strand over and twist to form bread stick. Place bread sticks on greased baking sheet; brush with melted butter. Cover with plastic wrap. Let rise in warm place until double, 1 to 1½ hours.

d) Heat oven to 375°. Bake bread sticks until golden brown, 30 to 35 minutes. (Makes 15)

HOWARD C. TOOKE

Republican Candidate for STATE SENATOR

Speaks out on BIG GOVERNMENT

I have been a consistent advocate of the concept that Local Government (City and County) is best because it is closer to the people it serves.
Several years ago I supported and worked for a workable Home Rule option now available to most cities if they so choose, but only if they so choose.
I have consistently opposed efforts to impose mandatory statewide standards and programs on local communities, which in many cases would create problems which did not exist.
The City of Cape Girardeau, whom I represented as Mayor, recently won a significant Supreme Court decision declaring States, Counties and Cities to be free from Federal regulation of their employees. This will be a landmark decisions affecting other Constitutional rights of local Governments.

VOTE FOR A MAN WHO BELIEVES LOCAL GOVERNMENT IS BEST AND WHO HAS ACTED IN SUPPORT OF THOSE BELIEFS!

Paid for by Tooke for Senate Committee: C.A. Hood, Chairman. Charles C. Leming, Treasurer. Box 783, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Kirkpatrick names bell-weather counties

JEFFERSON CITY — If the general election were held today, Missouri Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick says the returns from only a few counties would probably indicate the winners of each statewide race on the ballot.

Kirkpatrick, Missouri's chief election official, has made a list of the state's "bell-weather" counties which have traditionally supported the winner of statewide races.

Kirkpatrick advises presidential campaign organizations to pay close attention to the mood of the voters in Buchanan County, where St. Joseph is located. That county has supported the winner of each presidential race since 1912, except when a majority of the county's voters voted for Richard Nixon over John F. Kennedy in 1960.

Candidates aspiring to the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by retiring Sen. Stuart Symington should watch election night returns from Ste. Genevieve County. Kirkpatrick says that county, bordering the Mississippi River south of St. Louis, has gone with the winner in all 15 Senate races since 1932.

If tradition holds true in the governor's race, Worth County may be a good barometer this year for pollsters and political analysts. The Iowa border county has missed supporting the winner in only two gubernatorial races -- 1884 and 1924 -- in the last 100 years.

Kirkpatrick believes Jackson County, which includes most of Kansas City, may be the kev in deciding the race for lieutenant governor. Voters there supported the winner 16 consecutive times beginning in 1912.

As a candidate for re-election to his fourth term as secretary of state, Kirkpatrick makes it clear he'll be paying close attention to Buchanan County returns for a reason other than the outcome of the presidential race. Records show Buchanan County voters have established a perfect record in "calling" the winner of the secretary of state's race -- at least since 1884.

Jackson County could be critical to another statewide race this year -- the contest for state treasurer. Jackson County has a perfect record of picking the winner since 1892.

While most political observers in Jefferson City rate the attorney general's race as a tossup -- Kirkpatrick thinks the winning candidate must do well in Cole County, site of the State Capitol. Kirkpatrick says Cole Countians have been accurately picking attorney general winners in 17 consecutive elections since 1908.

While the next election of a state auditor is still two years away, Kirkpatrick advises prospective candidates for the post to spend time campaigning in Jackson and Jefferson counties in particular. Jackson County has gone with the auditor's race winner in 21 elections since 1892, missing a perfect record only in 1916. Jefferson County, just south of St. Louis, has supported the winning candidate for auditor since 1900, except in the election of 1924.

Even though Missourians have been electing their governors and lieutenant governors since 1820, and all state offices since 1852, Kirkpatrick says it's hard to research many election returns from Missouri's early years of statehood.

"Many of the early state records were destroyed by fires. the Missouri Records and Archives program we administer offers careful preservation to existing documents, but the sad truth is much of our history went up in smoke," he said.

Complete statewide returns for all offices are only available beginning with the election of 1896. Some fragmentary election records are maintained in the archives of the secretary of state's office, while Kirkpatrick personally safeguards original volumes of Missouri's Official Manuals dating back to 1878.

Kirkpatrick is quick to note a list of "bell-weather" counties is not a scientific way of predicting elections. A highly mobile population and a decrease of voter participation linked with more "split- ticket" voting habits could quickly change county voting patterns, he says.

"On the other hand," Kirkpatrick observed, "I guess it wouldn't hurt to make another visit to Buchanan County before the election."

Letters to the Editor

Editor
Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri 63801

Dear Editor:

Another Christmas season is rapidly approaching-- the time of year we most enjoy being with family and friends. However, for many thousands of our fellow Americans this will be a very lonely Christmas; they cannot be with their families because they are stationed overseas with the United States Armed Forces. For a large number of these young men and women this will be the first Christmas away from home.

Your readers can help make this holiday season a little less lonely for many of these young people by joining in the collection of Christmas mail sponsored by Military Overseas Mail. This is an ideal project for school classes, clubs, scouts, and other groups or organizations as well as individuals and families. For more information, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to MOM, Box 4428, Arlington, VA 22204. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Lee Spencer
Coordinator

P.S. Editor-- We would appreciate it very much if this letter could be published around the end of October. Thanks.

2. Card of Thanks

I want to express my sincere thanks to all my friends and neighbors for their kindness and help during the illness and death of my loved one. Although I can never say thanks to you in words the way I really feel in my heart at this time, as I have broken my right arm also. I can't think of a thing left undone by them -- so many beautiful flowers, food, prayers, and gifts of money. Thanks also to Father Bauer and the Sisters for their prayers and visits, to Brother Britt, Kewanee Baptist minister, and Rev. and Mrs. Watkins of the Methodist Church for prayers, visits, and kindness shown by all. My thanks and appreciation to Jim Mills and Jimmy Harrell who were on ambulance duty for their kindness and consideration. These thoughtful deeds will never be forgotten. Thanks to all and may God bless each and every one of you.

Shelly then turned in a $45,000 bond Tuesday afternoon, and Judge Ragland called a hearing Wednesday morning to clarify the matter, saying that the bond matter was no longer the issue.

The new sheriff, Farris, a 49-year-old farmer from Braggadocio, and former deputy under Orton in the 1960's, was sworn in and posted the $50,000 bond.

Pemiscot County Prosecutor Mike Hazel said alleged irregularities in Shelly's conduct of office are being investigated, but that no formal charges have been filed against him. Two weeks ago, Hazel filed an ouster petition against Shelly in Circuit Court, alleging he allowed illegal gambling activity in the county.

suggested courses in parent training to help young people learn how to train their children to bring out each child's full potential.

Bond said it is a tragedy when a child graduates from high school and cannot read or write — a growing problem in the country.

Something needs to be done, Bond said, adding that the competency examination is a step in the right direction.

The examination would be given at the end of the eighth grade, he said, and if failed, the student would be given remedial courses until he passed. A student who passes the exam would be given a competency certificate.

Vocational education is an extremely important part of the school system and society, he said.

Bond cited Sikeston's vocational education program as a good example of what can be done. But, he added other districts in the state have not done as well and need improvement.

Bond said consumer frauds are often perpetrated on young people because they have not been taught how to make wise use of their money. He said courses are needed to train students in the ways of the marketplace.

The state funding formula needs revision, Bond said, because the current formula no longer provides equal funds.

Longtime administrator is retiring from SeMo State

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Southeast Missouri State University will lose a longtime administrator Friday when Mary Helen Flentge retires as associate dean of students.

But through Dean Flentge, a 1932 graduate of the University of Missouri, will no longer be on the campus, she will be remembered there for her philosophy of education and her outspoken views.

The dean has long felt that students should be accorded more respect and responsibilities than they usually receive.

"The most obvious fault there is in education today is the lack of respect shown to students," said Dean Flentge.

"There's damn little of it," added the outspoken dean. "Too many educators have no respect for their students. To them, they're all brats."

Dean Flentge believes this to be a serious under-estimation of the quality of today's youth. "Students respond to the level at which they are treated," she said. "If you assume they are men and women, you hand them a certain amount of maturity. If they don't come up to it, well, it's something to look up for," she continued.

Instead of surpressing students, Dean Flentge believes they should be encouraged.

"It is important to communicate a level of expectation they can obtain, and not one where you hitch your wagon to a star. Few of of us will be stars and none of us needs to be a failure every night," she said.

Dean Flentge was recruited for her position in 1958 by former university president Mark Scully, while she was pursuing a master's degree at the University of Missouri. Though hired as the associate dean of students, she quickly became, at least unofficially, dean of women.

She had some reservations about the unofficial title, remembering the deans of women she had known to be "pigeon-breasted, unsmiling people."

However, her major concern in the beginning was about enforcing discipline. She wasn't sure she could be a strict disciplinarian. However, she came to believe that discipline, not necessarily of a violent nature, can be a valuable learning tool.

"I never asked students to like discipline, but I asked them to understand the necessity," said Dean Flentge.

One of the dean's main regrets during her stay at Southeast Missouri State has been the rapid growth in enrollment.

"The growth has bothered me," she said, adding, "When it was below 2,000, I knew most of the students, or at least the groups they were assocated with. After it reached 3,000, I lost communication."

Dean Flentge, who joined the SeMo State staff after raising two daughters, has strong feelings about the treatment of women, both on the campus and in society at large.

"Women are chattel; that's the traditional role women have played," she declared.

The dean — who can remember the days at SeMo State when women weren't allowed off-campus in slacks, when shorts were forbidden in Academic Hall and when hand-holding between students on campus was prohibited — has always championed the cause of women students.

She was particularly instrumental in the revision of the campus policy on women's hours.

After several years of trying, a key system was initiated for sophomore, junior and senior women. Several more years went by, and the system was extended to freshman women, effectively abolishing women's hours, a move Dean Flentge felt long overdue.

"It's assumed that each young person who comes to college has the responsibility of a key," said the dean, again referring to the respect for students as people which she feels is all too often lacking.

What lies ahead for Dean Flentge? According to her, enjoyment of retirement.

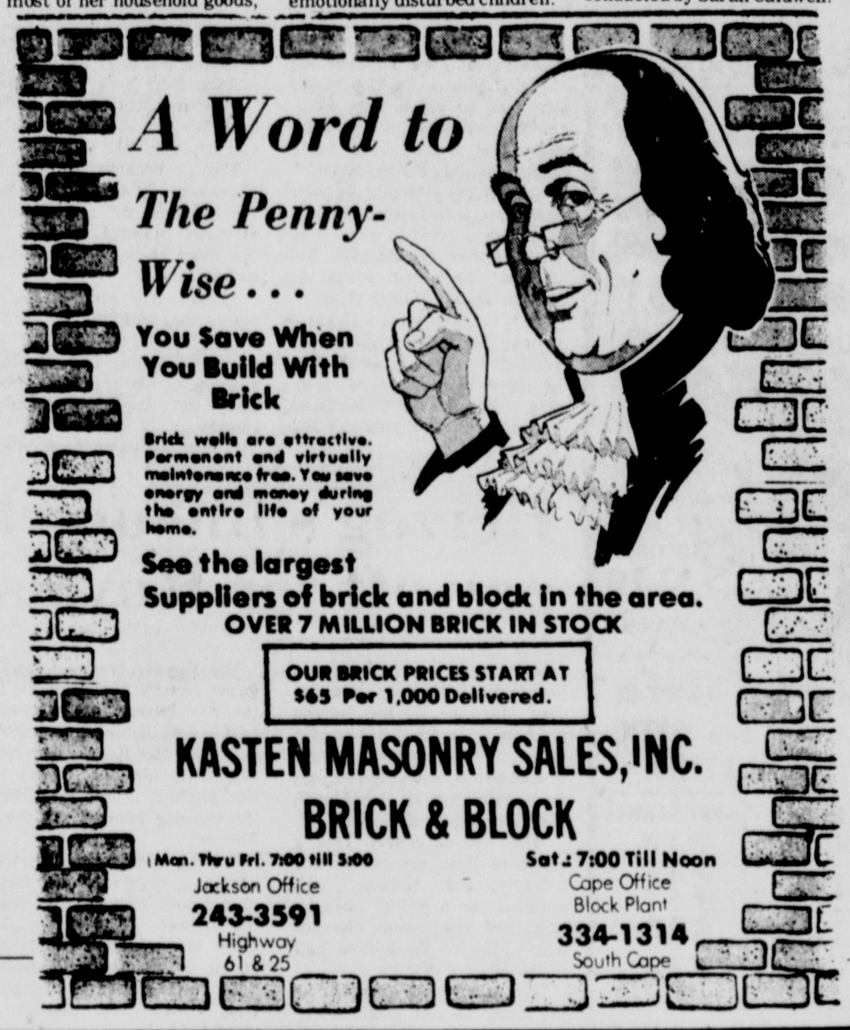

"I'm outspoken. That's an advantage of being old," she said. "You don't have to conform to anything."

She continued, "I'm looking forward to old age so I can dress eccentrically."

Having already sold her home in Cape Girardeau and disposed of most of her household goods, Dean Flentge, immediately after her last day on the job, plans to move to New York City, which is where her daughters live. One is an executive recruiter and vice president of a firm and the other is a teacher of emotionally disturbed children.

What does she plan to do first? Exactly what one would expect of any self- respecting women's rights advocate: Attend the opera, "The Barber of Seville", starring Beverly Sills and conducted by Sarah Caldwell.

Royals kayo Catfish to even series

NEW YORK (AP) — Having beaten New York Yankees ace Catfish Hunter in the game they had to win to stay alive, the Kansas City Royals go after their first World Series berth tonight against Ed Figueroa.

The Yankees, hoping for their first American League pennant in 12 years, tried to wrap it up with Hunter Wednesday. But the bid backfired when the Royals kayoed Hunter early.

That left Figueroa, a 19-game winner during the regular season but the loser in Game Two of these best-of-five AL playoffs, for tonight's deciding game. Today is Figueroa's 28th birthday.

The Royals forced the championship series to its limit by beating New York 7-4 Wednesday with a barrage of extra-base hits that included a double and triple by Hal McRae.

That overcame a pair of home runs by Graig Nettles of the Yankees and sent the two division champions back for one more game in this see-saw series.

McRae, who broke out of a slump that had left him hitless in the first three games of the series, thought that beating Hunter in Game Four would give the Royals the edge tonight.

"I feel we have the momentum now," said McRae. "I think we're in the best position. We beat their best pitcher — their big gun. They won't have the same faith in the guy they throw tomorrow (Thursday night) that they had today (Wednesday)."

Yankees Manager Billy Martin bristled at that suggestion. "Figueroa will start the fifth game, and we have a lot of faith in him," he said.

What was Martin's reason for using Figueroa, who has lost three decisions to Kansas City this season, including the second game of the playoffs?

"Nineteen wins," snapped the Yankees manager. "That's a pretty good reason."

Ignored as a possible starter for the final game was left-hander Ken Holtzman, a veteran of playoff and World Series competition during his years in Oakland. "Holtzman hasn't been pitching well lately," said Martin. "I really didn't consider him."

If the Yankees had no plans for Holtzman, Royals Manager Whitey Herzog could have used him on loan. Asked about his fifth game starter, Herzog had to hedge Wednesday night.

"I have no idea right now," he said. "I have a choice of four — Dennis Leonard, Marty Pattin, Al Fitzmorris and Paul Splittorff. If I had Holtzman, I'd pitch him."

Splittorff, who pitched 5 2-3 innings of shutout relief in Game Two, would have had the assignment almost automatically if he had not had to warm up Wednesday. But he was anxious for another shot at the Yankees.

Leonard was the second game starter and was knocked out early. But Herzog thinks the 17-game winner could do a creditable job. "He's a power pitcher and if he throws strikes he can give them trouble," the manager said.

Fitzmorris is the only Royals player who has not played in the series so far. "If I pitched, I'd feel strange," he said. "I think my bid was turned down."

Pattin faced just one batter in his only playoff appearance. "I'm ready," he said. "I should be strong. I couldn't get the ball over the plate the other night."

Herzog's lineup changes pay off for Royals

NEW YORK (AP) — In a desperate situation, Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog displayed some level-headed strategy—level-headed because it worked and saved the Royals from extinction in the American League playoff series.

"Hey I'm no genius. This is my first time around at this thing," said Herzog, who sounded like a genius when he explained the lineup changes which affected the bottom half of the Royals' lineup.

"We just haven't gotten the job done in run production," said Herzog, whose Royals hammered five extra-base hits in beating the New York Yankees 7-4 Wednesday and squaring their best-of-five series at two games apiece.

A victory in Game 5 tonight will send the Royals on to the World Series against the National League champion Cincinnati Reds.

"The pressure will be even," said Herzog. "We've each won two games and we've each lost two games."

The Royals' essential fourth-game victory was produced by the five hitters in the bottom half of the lineup who accounted for all nine Kansas City hits. There was also some clutch relief pitching from Doug Bird, the winning pitcher, and Steve Mingori.

One key move by Herzog was replacing regular second baseman Frank White with 37-year-old veteran Cookie Rojas. Another was making 21-year-old rookie Jamie Quirk the designated hitter instead of slumping Hal McRae, who started in right field.

"Cookie's a better hitter and more of a clutch ballplayer," said Herzog of Rojas, a 15-year veteran with four different teams who has never played in a World Series. "I wanted to get Cookie's bat in the lineup because we needed offensive help."

The help he got from Rojas was two singles, two runs scored and a sacrifice fly.

Quirk preceded Rojas in the rejuvenated Royals' lineup, hitting in the sixth position. Before his starting assignment Wednesday, Quirk was hitless in two at bats.

But in his second at-bat Wednesday, Quirk hit a booming drive to left-center field that scored McRae with the Royals' fourth run and sent Yankee starter Catfish Hunter to the showers. A sacrifice fly by Rojas then brought home Quirk and gave the Royals a 5-2 lead.

"Just to face Catfish Hunter is a dream," said Quirk, a .246 batter in 64 games with the Royals this season. "I haven't played too much, although Whitey has put me in some tough games as DH."

None was any tougher or more important than Wednesday's game.

The big gun offensively for the Royals was their little pistol, 5-foot-4 shortstop Freddie Patek. The smooth-fielding shortstop, batting from the No. 8 position, smacked a pair of doubles and knocked in three runs.

Reds players divided on who they's rather face

CINCINNATI (AP) — They're playing a waiting game in Cincinnati — and they don't seem to care who shows up at Riverfront Stadium Saturday.

The Cincinnati Reds, fresh from their three-game sweep of Philadelphia in the National League playoffs, began looking ahead to the World Series.

For some, it was a matter of taking on the bigger name.

For others, it was a matter of raking in a bigger paycheck.

And for most, it was a matter of believing that whichever team wound up representing the American League would also wind up a loser.

"I don't care who we play because these guys represent the best team in baseball," Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson said Wednesday as he awaited the outcome of the best-of-five playoff between the New York Yankees and Kansas City Royals, now tied 2-2.

"There isn't another club in baseball that can match the eight players we can put on the field every day," Anderson added. "This isn't any three or four-man team, like most clubs."

Anderson said he believed "some of the younger players are hoping it will be in New York. But that's because Yankee Stadium seats more than the Kansas City park and they're figuring that playing New York will mean more money to them."

Gary Nolan, the right-hander who started the final game of the Reds' playoff against the Phillies, said emphatically that he was hoping to play New York "because I figure it's a once-in-a-lifetime shot. I've never seen Yankee Stadium except on television. And it would sure make me feel proud, standing out there on the mound."

Pete Rose also said he would prefer going against New York, but for a more practical reason. "I know the Yankees' pitchers better because I've faced most of them before," he said. "I guess you might say it's a psychological thing with me, but it always bothers me when I'm facing a pitcher for the first time."

Ray Shore, Cincinnati's special assignment scout who has been keeping close tabs on both American League playoff clubs, said he would rather see the Royals win the AL flag.

"Kansas City, that's the club I'd like for us to play in the series," Shore said. "The Yanks have the more experienced staff and I think they'd have a better chance of holding down our hitters. And the Kansas City park has Astroturf like ours. That's another reason why I'd rather see us play them than the Yankees."

7For the most part, though, the Reds were being non-committal about their possible opponent.

"I don't care which team it is," said left-hander Don Gullett, the Cincinnati starter in the World Series opener, summing up the Reds' viewpoint. "All I know is I'll be ready when Saturday comes."

Play On Words Strong Suit Of Armour

THE HAPPY BOOKERS. By Richard Armour. McGraw-Hill. 132 Pages. $6.95.

This little volume bears the subtitle "A Playful History of Librarians and Their World from the Stone Age to the Distant Future," and a lucky thing it does, lest the browsing reader, unfamiliar with Richard Armour's penchant for pun and games, takes it to be the story of theatrical agents who like their work.

The jacket blurb promises that this is a "largely factual" account, but the history is a little hard to keep track of when viewed through the author's wry eye. Examples:

—The first public library was established by C.A. Pollio, who flourished in the first century B.C., long before the Salk vaccine.

—Until the invention of typography, there was little or no opportunity for what was to become the most exciting feature of the printed book: the typographical error.

—In a sense, the pyramids were libraries, as they contained guidebooks which would tell the deceased where he would go. He might have been told this while alive but was too annoyed to pay attention.

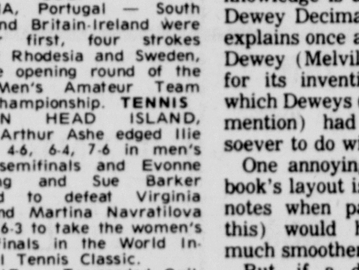

In addition to this wealth of knowledge is a chapter on the Dewey Decimal System which explains once and for all which Dewey (Melvil) is responsible for its invention, as well as which Deweys (too numerous to mention) had nothing whatsoever to do with it.

One annoying feature of the book's layout is the use of footnotes when parentheses (like this) would have made for much smoother reading.

But, if a distorted history laced with groan-inducing puns is your reading pleasure, or if you just want a little book to have a good time with, run down to your local bookseller for a copy of "The Happy Bookers."

Don Miller signs his name to a St. Louis Cardinal minor league contract yesterday at the home of his parents here in Sikeston. Don Miller inks pact with St. Louis Cardinals

Former Sikeston High School and University of New Mexico hurler Don Miller signed a minor league contract with the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday afternoon at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Don Miller of 911 South Prairie in Sikeston.

Miller, 22, will report to the Cardinals' spring training camp in St. Petersburg, Florida, according to Redbird scout Gary Howard of Sikeston. Howard said that after having a chance to show what he can do in spring training, Miller would be assigned to the Cardinals' Calgary, Alberta team in the Pioneer League. The Calgary team was formerly the Sarasota team at the rookie level.

"This is something I've always wanted to do," said the tall righthander, who worked for the Sikeston Saints team in the Bi-State League this past summer after a layoff of more than a year from organized baseball. "I'm going to give it my best shot."

It was sparkling 1-0 shutout against the Cape Capahas here in Sikeston that particularly caught the attention of the Cardinals. Miller was invited to an individual tryout at Busch Stadium, where the decision was made to sign the Sikeston athlete to a contract.

Miller played for the Sikeston Bulldogs in high school, where he earned all-state honors. Perhaps the most memorable game hurled by the curveballing hurler was a 1-0 victory over Gideon in the finals of the District Tournament in 1971. The opposing pitcher was Mark Littell, now with the Kansas City Royals.

Don performed at the University of New Mexico beginning in the 1972 season, where he compiled a combined three-season record of 21-4. He graduated in 1975.

The signing sent baseball experts checking to find out the last time a Sikeston player signed a Cardinal contract. Most agreed that the most recent Cardinal signee from Sikeston was Lindon Duncan, who played at SHS in the early 1950's.

Advance and Bloomfield in Stoddard finals

ESSEX -- Advance and Bloomfield will square off tonight at approximately 7:30 at the Richland High School gymnasium in the varsity finals of the Stoddard county Volleyball Tournament.

Both picked up semifinal round victories Wednesday night.

Fourth-seeded Advance powered its way past Woodland 15-10 and 15-4 in the opening varsity matchup. Second-seeded Bloomfield dumped Bernie 15-1 and 15-12.

In the junior varsity tournament, third-seeded Bloomfield blasted Dexter 15-3 and 15-0, while Bernie, unseeded in the event, pulled its second upset in a row, dumping top-seeded Advance 15-10 and 15-13.

Tonight, Advance and Bloomfield meet at 6:30 for the junior varsity championship, followed by the A team finals at about 7:30.

Blues win 3-2 over Colorado

DENVER (AP) — Floyd Thomson converted a pass from Larry Patey with 6:16 remaining in the game Wednesday night, insuring the St. Louis Blues' 3-2 triumph over the Colorado Rockies in a National Hockey League game.

Thomson took the pass 10 feet in front of the Colorado goal and rammed it past goalie Michel Plasse to build the St. Louis lead to 3-1 and help the Blues survive Gary Croteau's goal just under two minutes later.

A St. Louis penalty in the closing seconds gave the Rockies a manpower advantage and Colorado ramoved Plasse with 28 seconds left in an effort to gain a tie. But St. Louis cleared the puck and skated off the final seconds to record the decision.

The Blues' Garry Unger slapped home his second goal of the season early in the second period to open the scoring, but Nelson Pyatt tied it midway through the session.

Over 300 attend rites for Pirate hurler Moose

EXPORT, Pa. (AP) — The baseball players who shared his victories carried pitcher Bob Moose of the Pittsburgh Pirates to his grave here in his hometown.

Pirates outfielder Al Oliver, joined by pitchers Jim Rooker, Bruce Kison and Dave Giusti, bore the casket to the grave site Wednesday after funeral services for Moose, who died in a weekend car crash.

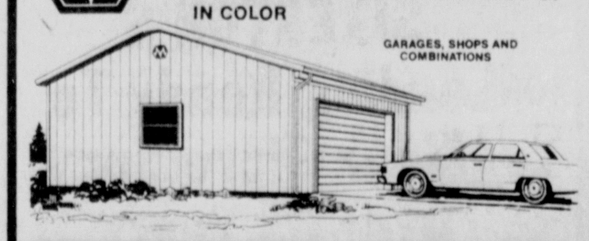

Also attending was former Pirates pitcher Dock Ellis, who was the winning pitcher the night before as the New York Yankees defeated Kansas City in the third game of the American League championships.

Ellis flew into Pittsburgh for the funeral and chartered a heliocopter to this Westmoreland County town.

"Bob's death reminds us of the brevity of life," said the Rev. Gervase Chutis said of the 29-year-old Moose.

The Rev. Chutis baptized Moose and married him and his wife, Alberta, in St. Marys Catholic Church, the same church where the funeral service was held.

Local schools note 'school lunch week'

How does one go about planning meals for 3,000 people every day?

"It isn't easy," says Dorothy Lawrence, director of food services for Sikeston Public Schools. "The most important thing to consider is the time element and what the ladies can get done in the time they have to prepare."

This is National School Lunch Week; and now, more than ever before, school lunches are a vital part of education in Sikeston's public schools. All of the cooking is done at the facilities in the high school, and the food is transported via hot carts to other Sikeston schools.

"All the carts have temperature controls," Mrs. Lawrence explains. "The women turn them on first thing in the morning, and the only time they are turned off is during the actual transportation." In this way the food stays hot for all the schools.

Several improvements have been made over the past few years in the Sikeston system. All schools now have deep fat fryers except the middle school, and food such as French fries, burritos, fish and other fat-fried items can be prepared by the cooks at the individual schools.

"We try to plan around our government commodities," Mrs. Lawrence says, "though many people will be surprised to learn that government commodities only comprise about 17 per cent of the food we use."

There are also government requirements in a Type A program, and the food service staff must be sure to include two ounces of edible protein, three-fourths cup of fruits and-or vegetables, one-half pint of milk, a slice of bread or its equivalent, and necessary vitamins and minerals.

"Then, after all the requirements and time are considered, we do try to include food which the students will like."

Mrs. Lawrence admits that kids like anything on a bun. "Whether it's a hamburger, barbecue, juicy burger or a hot dog, kids really like to eat sandwiches made with a bun."

The goal of the food service staff is variety, and they try to include different kinds of food, giving the students a choice. There is a special a la carte line at the junior and senior high schools, and there is always a hot dog substitution in addition to the regular plate at the middle school.

If you're wondering how much food it takes to serve 3,000 tacos, start with 450 pounds of ground beef. If you want a hamburger plate, start with 500 pounds of ground beef, 650 pounds of frozen French fries and 90 three-fourth quart cans of vegetables.

Or better yet, leave it to Dorothy Lawrence and the food service staff. They know.

SeMo U. students get break

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Most students at Southeast Missouri State University took a series of six- week examinations last week. This week they get their reward in the form of a one- day break from classes on Friday.

While the students and faculty will be away, however, others on the campus will not be at play. Administrative offices will remain open.

Friday's break is the first for the students since the fall semester began on Aug. 23, and there will not be another until the Thanksgiving recess which begins at noon on Nov. 24 and ends at 8 a.m. Nov. 29.

Fall semester final examinations are scheduled Dec. 13-16, and then the students will have a long vacation. The spring semester begins on Jan. 10.

On the lightside!

KOHLER, Wis. (AP) — Some people have dogu that will bring them the newspaper. Scamp, a 9-year-old cocker spaniel, brings home his own fresh-picked apples.

Elmer and LaVerne Bridson, Scamp's owners, say he developed his love of apples several years ago.

"He happened to be sitting under a tree when one fell down in front of him," Mrs. Bridson said Tuesday. "He sniffed it, rolled it over and finally took a bite."

It wasn't long before Scamp refused to wait for people to give him apples and started picking his own from low-hanging branches.

Former Sikeston resident

SeMo U grad returns as the new placement director

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A 1957 Southeast Missouri State University graduate has been appointed acting director of placement at the university.

Dr. William G. Grimsley assumed the duties at the university upon the departure of Ronald E. King in mid-September. King took a position at the University of Missouri-Columbia, where he will also be a part-time doctoral student.

Grimsley, 41, was most recently associated with the Colorado Department of Education, where he spent four years in various positions. He was an evaluation consultant, the director of a program involving 10 states and an assistant to the associate commissioner.

After receiving bachelor of science degrees in both secondary education and business administration from Southeast Missouri State, Grimsley began his career in education as a teacher in Sikeston. He later taught and was a counselor at Kahoka and Jefferson City, and he served as acting vice principal in the Kansas City school system.

At the college level, Grimsley has been a counselor, research assistant and graudate assistant at the University of Missouri. He also spent two years as a research associate for the Minnesota Higher Education Coordination Commission, where he worked on a study of the postsecondary educational needs of the urban disadvantaged in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area.

Grimsley received his master's degree in guidance and student personnel administration from Teachers College at Columbia University in New York in 1960 and his doctor of philosophy degree in education administration from the University of Missouri in 1969.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Grimsley of 919 Park Ave., Sikeston.

"a Man and a Record to Trust"

James I. Spainhower
Democrat for Re-election
STATE TREASURER

He served four terms in the Missouri Legislature.

His educational degrees include: Bachelor of Divinity, Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts and a Doctorate in Political Science.

His investments as State Treasurer have earned over $71 million in interest. That's 45% of all interest earned by Missouri in the 20 years the law has permitted the investment of idle funds.

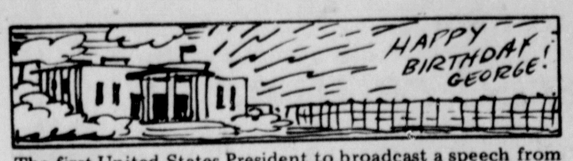

He increased from 74% to 96% the daily average of all state funds earning interest.

He has more than doubled (from 260 to 590) the number of banks holding interest-bearing state funds.

His investment policies earn far more interest and . . .
. . . encourage banks to make more loans to needy Missouri students
. . . provide needed capital in areas of special economic hardship.
. . . promote the creation and expansion of industry throughout the state.
. . . encourage banks to participate actively in projects to better their local communities.

Jim Spainhower has become widely involved in Missouri's economic and monetary affairs, allowing him to speak out authoritatively on issues affecting the taxpayer's pocket book. He has the reputation for being a fiscal conservative who makes the very most of each tax dollar.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Marshall are parents of a baby girl born on the 11th.

That three to two score sounds like a baseball game, but was the final result of one of the closest and hardest fought football games ever played by Charleston and Sikeston High Schools. Sikeston scored a safety in the first five minutes of play, when a Charleston punt was blocked behind the goal line, Charleston recovering. Charleston edged into the lead halfway through the third quarter, Faris booting a place kick over for the only other score of the game.

Notes of the game. The player directly responsible for Sikeston's defeat is a former Sikeston High man. Ogilvie, carrying the ball far into Sikeston's territory on an intercepted pass, gave Charleston the ball in a position where they were able to score. Ogilvie attended Sikeston High last fall for a few weeks, transferring to Charleston, when his mother moved to that town.

Southeast Missouri wells to be measured again

ROLLA— The Water Resources Division of the U.S. Geological Survey will begin an intensive two-week program Monday to again measure ground-water levels in the Southeast Lowlands.

About 750 wells which were measured in October 1975 and April are included in the water-level network. This network is part of the ground-water data-collection program for the evaluation of the water resources of the Southeastern Lowlands.

The measurements will be used to construct water-level change maps through the periods October 1975 to October 1976, and April 1976 to October 1976. These change maps will help determine the stresses on the aquifer during the previous year and during the last summer.

The three-year study of the water resources of the Southeastern Lowlands is a cooperative project of the Department of Natural Resources, Division of Geology and Land Survey and the U.S. Geological Survey. The staffs of both agencies are involved in the overall studies.

The 4,000 square-mile study area includes all of Dunklin, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Scott and Stoddard counties and parts of Bollinger, Butler, Cape Girardeau, Ripley and WayneCounties.

The study, which was prompted by the rapid irrigation development in the last 15 years, will provide quantitative information on the potential for future development of the ground-water system for agriculture and industry.

This study is being made under the direction of Anthony Homyk, district chief, U.S. Geological Survey, Water Resources Division, and Dr. Wallace B. Howe, state geologist and director, Division of Geology and Land Survey, DNR.

The field party will consist of G. Alexander, L. F. Emmett, E. J. Harvey, R. R. Luckey, G. B. Malone and H. L. Reed. The coopertation of the landowners in southeast Missouri will be greatly appreciated by the field party.

Hates to be paid

Fix-it man makes repairs fun

CHENOA, Ill. (AP) — Housewives for miles around are taking their broken appliances to Loyal (Slim) Augspurger, who does fine repair work and hates to get paid for it.

Since Slim, 72, opened a fix-it shop three years ago in the basement of his home in this central Illinois community, he has repaired several thousand appliances — small ones like toasters, electric irons, fans, blenders, coffee makers and vacuum cleaners. He has a backlog of more than 100 awaiting repairs.

"I don't like to take money for what I like to do," he says. "I charge just enough to pay for some replacement parts and now and then to replace a tool. For instance, a broken $15 or $20 appliance, I'll make it run like new for around $2.50 even if I have to spend four or five hours on it. If they took it to a big store the minimum would be $6 to $8.

"I just enjoy doing it. The name of the game isn't money, it's being happy doing what you're doing. I don't need money, so I don't try to make it. I don't have the time to fool around with it, anyway," he says.

Augspurger, who is on Social Security, says there was no pension plan when he retired after 27 years as a stone quarry superintendent. His son, Marlow, left an appliance store to open his own repair shop for large household items like refrigerators. He gave his dad an assortment of small parts.

"He left me 100 drawers and jars full of tubes, screws, transistors and other things," says Slim, who stands 6-feet-2 and weighs 150 pounds. "So I had to learn how to fix things. I just started out and learned as I went along.

"I've never had a dissatisfied customer. In fact," he adds, "some of them were so happy with my work they thought I undercharged them and mailed me more money."

Slim says his most difficult job was repairing the corroded wiring of an electric pot that a housewife had tried to clean by submerging it in a basin of water and detergent. "It took me about 10 hours to fix it. I charged $5. Such a thing is a challenge for an older person. Part of the joy of fixing is helping people in trouble out of it."

Slim also gets personal satisfaction collecting old fans with brass blades. He has 17 of them, one from 1898. "I fixed them all. It was just lovely," he said.

Government in the United States now employs one out of six workers and controls more than one-third of total spending, The Conference Board notes.

The heaviest chicken on record is named "Weirdo" and weighs 22 pounds.

"HEALTH TIPS"

A quick way to "old age" is thru boredom-the way to remain young and vigorous in old age is to keep active and enthusiastic about living. At age 65, we can look forward to another 15 years or more of life. If we let ourselves go to seed, life can become a burden.

There is so much of beauty and stimulation all around us, so many skills and crafts we can experiment with, that life can and should remain active and satisfying.

ANNUAL HUNTING GUIDE

To hunt, or not to hunt-- that is the question.

While apologies may be due to William Shakespeare, there will be no such apologies passed between two powerful forces--the sportsmen of America and the conservation groups who oppose the hunting of game.

Hunters, who for the most part are conservationists in the truest meaning of the word, have been pictured by wildlife protection groups as cold-hearted killers, preying on the defenseless animals and hunting "merely for the thrill of the kill".

This stereotype is probably true in a few isolated cases. There are a few "hunters" who refuse to buy licenses, bait their dove hunting grounds, use bright lights to hunt deer at night and sell their illegally-taken meat on the black market for a handsome profit.

Unfortunately, these few "sportsmen" ruin the image of hunting for the majority.

But the truth is that most hunters--those who abide by the established rules and who enjoy the challenge and the sport of a good hunt--are genuinely concerned about the welfare of wildlife.

By the heavy taxes placed upon hunters in the form of hunting licenses, deer tags, duck stamps and by the taxes levied on guns and ammunition, the hunters of America share most of burden of funding the conservation programs that make sure that game remain plentiful. By the placing of quotas and other restrictions on the amunt of game that can be taken, the delicate balance between the wildlife population and the amount of food available to them is scientifically maintained. For these things, the hunter must get most of the credit.

So with the first Daily Standard Hunting Section, we salute the hunters of Missouri and America. We hope the information within these pages will in some small way help you in your activities this fall an winter. Good hunting!

Missouri hunters can expect mixed bag in '77

By JOEL M. VANCE
Missouri Department of Conservation

Missouri hunters this year can expect a mixed bag as far as success goes.

Some species appear to be in good supply, especially rabbits. Others may be down, but not enough to cause worry.

Deer hunting has taken over as Missouri's most popular hunting sport. There were 221,472 firearms deer hunters in 1975.

Rabbits, traditionally the most-sought-after game animal, attracted 219,477 hunters, who took nearly 2.1 million cottontails.

Squirrels made up the most numerous bag in 1975. Some 217,767 hunters took home 2,955,300 bushytails.

The outlook for squirrel hunters in 1976 is fairly good, but a hard freeze and drought have cut heavily into acorn and other nut production.

That always cuts into the next year's squirrel crop, so hunters may find slim pickings in 1977.

Dove hunting should stay good until extreme cold weather. Drought induced farmers to cut corn for silage this year and silage cuts always are a set table for doves. Cold weather drives younger doves south, but older birds sometimes stick around all winter.

Missouri's duck season should be a good one, but the long range forecast for ducks is pessimistic. Part of the problem is a developing drought cycle that already has resulted in a decline in several species (9 per cent overall, ranging from 3 percent on canvasbacks to 27 percent on bluewing teal).

The state also showed a decline in its only native nesting duck, the wood duck, totaling nine per cent.

Rabbit production is the highest since 1959, with an average statewide of 1.1 rabbit per square mile.

Quail surveys, complicated by extreme drought, show an adequate production for bird hunters, but nothing to rave about.

Missouri goose hunters are reaping the reward of their patience several years ago. In 1968, goose managers decided that increasing pressure on the eastern prairie population -- made it necessary to increase the post-season size of the flock.

But, in the spring of 1969, a disastrous snowstorm on Hudson's Bay breeding grounds cut heavily into the flock. Hunters saw the quotas drop from 25,000 at Swan Lake to 14,000 as goose managers tried to restore the health of the flock and to reach the 200,000 post-season population level.

It all came together last season, when the quota rose again to 25,000 without damaging the breeding population. This year, once again, the quota is still 25,000 and the future for the big birds is bright.

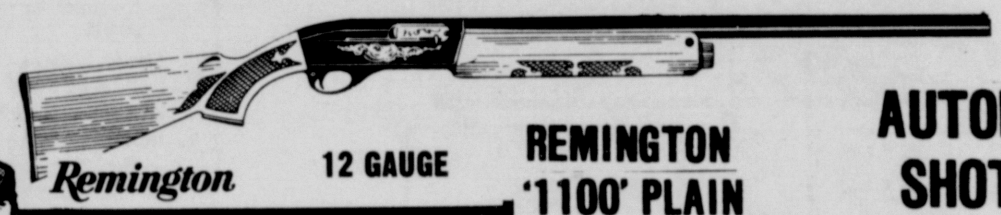

Most game is at least average in numbers. Despite a 51,000-deer harvest last year, the deer population looks good. Most areas have slightly more restrictive seasons this year to allow the doe population to recover from the loss of nearly 20,000 animals in the total 1975 harvest.

Deer biologists think that the Ozark area of the state is far below the deer population it could sustain without damage to the habitat.

They think most areas of north Missouri are near the optimum level, but many Ozark counties could double their deer population and still have good habitat. Missouri deer hunting has grown astonishingly in the last few years. Only 10 years ago, in 1966, there were 28,423 deer taken by 142,518 hunters.

In 1975, gun and bowhunters took a record 53,673 deer and the number of hunters had leaped to near the quarter-million mark.

Many not clear about gun laws

There are many myths floating about concerning the gun laws of Missouri. It would be good to find out just what a hunter or sportsman can do or cannot do with his gun--whether it be a rifle, shotgun or pistol.

Sawed off rifles or shotguns or machine guns, obviously, are banned in Missouri. But try to visualize the questions any sportsman would ask if he were entering the state with guns or if he were purchasing a gun for the first time.

As for carrying a gun on the street openly, there is no law against it. As long as you don't try to conceal it.

Is it legal, then, for a farmer to carry his guns on a rack across the back window of his pickup? Yes, it is legal, as long as he isn't flashing his lights across fields at night looking for game.

According to Missouri laws you technically could carry a pistol in each hand down the street as long as you don't flourish it in a menacing, angry or threatening manner. But whether concealed or in plain view, you cannot take a gun into a public assembly-- whether it be a picnic or church.

According to Sgt. Floyd Dunlap of the Kirkwood Police, one of countless communities which may have its own laws, you can walk down the street with a pistol in each hand and be legal "But we'd have a dozen calls in a few minutes and we'd have to check you out. We'd want to make sure you were peaceful."

It would be impossible to write a brochure on gun laws, especially concealed weapons. All laws depend on circumstances and intent. Even a farmer on his own land, under certain conditions, can be arrested for carrying a concealed weapon.

If you carry a gun on your floorboard at night it is considered a concealed weapon because the darkness hides it.

The Public Safety Firearms Code says no youngster 16 years of age or younger may carry a gun without being accompanied by an adult 21 or older--much less fire that gun. This apparently also covers farm kids.

And no gun may be fired across any road or highway, sidewalk or park. And you cannot fire from a boat, nor can you fire across or into the Missouri, Mississippi or Meramec Rivers or any lake or reservoir.

To hunt on someone else's property you must have permission from the owner.

And, of course, most municipalities won't let you fire a gun within the city limits.

The Missouri Conservation Department, of course, has its firearm rules for hunting. The worst offense is jacklighting for deer. Carrying a spot light in one hand and a gun in the other brings a swift fine. But you can use a flashlight and gun for hunting frogs and any fur-bearing animal such as a racoon when a dog is used to tree them.

Any sporting gun, except a shotgun larger than 10 gauge, may be used to take game except beaver, mink, muskrat and fish.

Pistols and rifles may not be used on birds. And shotguns must be limited to three shells.

To buy a pistol, you need a permit from the county sheriff.

Point values for ducks change

Waterfowl regulations for 1976 have been set in most states and, despite some changes in the point value of certain species of ducks and an early morning rather than noon starting time on opening day, the seasons will be much the same as last year.

Each year in August, guidelines are set for waterfowl seasons by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Each state, then, must draw up their own season regulations within this federal framework, which are subject to approval by the federal agency.

Some controversy errupted at this year's Flyway Council meeting when, despite a report by the Fish and Wildlife Service that this year's duck flight is down slightly from last year, the federal waterfowl managers set hunting guidelines that are more liberal than last year. Naturally, many of the biologists, who tend to be cautious in such matters, opposed these liberal guidelines. This eventually led to the warmed-over disputes between the northern and southern states in the Flyway Council, which resulted in nothing. The guidelines were adapted as proposed.

Essentially, the big changes are in point values. Duck which were 90 points last year are worth 70 this year. All birds which were worth 35 points last year are valued at 25 this year. This means that a hunter who bags a 70 point duck, such as a mallard hen or wood duck, can take three more 10 point ducks that same day, rather than one more, which was the case last year when these ducks were worth 90 points. Naturally, it's a good deal for the hunter.

The big news this year, however, has nothing to do with point values or shooting hours or number of ducks. The critical factor surrounding this year's water fowl season is the weather — a factor which single-handedly could cause waterfowl hunting this year to be the worse in years.

For example, Swan Lake, Missouri's popular goose and duck hunting area in the north- central part of the state, is completely dry. This is a lake which normally holds about 2000 acres of water. Silver Lake, the other main body of water in the Swan Lake Refuge, is low, but there is still some water there.

Illinois officials report that the Mississippi and Illinois Rivers are lower than they've been in years. While this allows food plants to grow on the soft mud banks, it will not be enough to attract a substantial number of ducks. The water is just too low. This year, while oiling up your shotgun and building that blind, put in a few prayers for rain. Then, have at it.

A 50-- day, split season has been set for Missouri duck hunters, opening Oct. 26 and running through Dec. 5, and opening again Dec. 26 and running through Jan. 3, 1977. Shooting hours are one-half hour before sunrise to sunset with a daily limit of ducks that reaches or exceeds 100 points.

The split season is something new for Missouri hunters, according to Mike Milonski, wildlife division chief of the Missouri Department of Conservation.

"We thought we'd try the split season this year to see how it works." Milonski said. "It is only an experiment which, if unsuccessful, will be dropped. What we're trying to do is give the hunters in the southern portion of the state a crack at late birds."

Canvasbacks are worth 100 points with hunting closed to this species on the Mississippi River from Alton Dam north to the Iowa line. Ducks valued at 70 points are mallard hens, wood ducks, black ducks, red heads and hooded mergansers. Pintail, teal, gadwall, scaup, shoveller and mergansers (other than hooded) are all worth 10 points. All other ducks, including mallard drakes, baldpate, goldeneye, etc., are worth 25 points.

Goose hunters will have a 45 day season beginning Oct. 26 and running through Dec. 10 with a daily limit of 1 Canada and 1 whitefront, and a possession limit of 2 Canadas and 2 whitefronts.

The Swan Lake zone will have a quota of 25,000 birds with hunting to begin Oct. 26 and running until Dec. 10, or until the quota is reached, whichever comes first.

Goose hunting in the Lower Mississippi Zone will also run 45 days, beginning Dec. 7 to Jan. 21, 1977. Daily limit is 2 Canadas or 2 Whitefront, or 1 of each with a possession limit of 4 birds in the aggregate, no more than 2 of which can be Canadas.

Goose hunting for Blue and Snow Geese will open Oct. 26 and run for 70 days, closing Jan. 3, 1977. The daily and possession limit on these birds is 5, which presents a variety of possibilities. A hunter may take five Blue or five Snow geese, or a combination of the two that equals five. Or, he may take one Canada and four Blues or Snows or one Canada and one Whitefront and three Blues or Snows -- as long as the daily total does not exceed five geese.

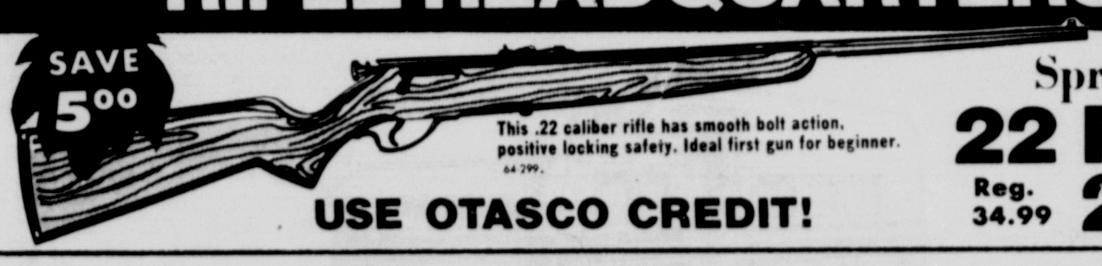

Wood ducks, such as those shown in nesting boxes above, are worth 70 points, according to the new revised point system established by the Department of Conservation. Waterfowl hunters may not kill another bird after they have accumulated 100 points in a single day.

Deer conditions different from those in 1975

For many hunters, the whitetail deer is the biggest of game.

Some never get the opportunity to hunt anything bigger. Others have hunted many species of large animals and consider the whitetails the most wary of the lot.

In 1975, nearly a quarter of a million hunters took to the deer woods of Missouri. They harvested a record 51,823 deer.

Deer hunting is a combination of comraderie with other hunters and of doing it yourself -- thinking man against an animal equipped with superlative senses of hearing, smell, sight and instinct.

Last Year's large harvest was made because does were legal quarry at the beginning of the season. This year, the restrictions make does legal at the end of the season in some zones, illegal in others and place a quota on them in still others.

In addition, hunting conditions are going to be much different in 1976. Drought and near-drought conditions will change the movement patterns the deer follow.

Unless there are large amounts of rainfall between now and opening day (November 13), deer must visit farms ponds and the larger streams for water. Many small streams are dry.

In addition, late spring frosts killed or damaged the nut and acorn crops in bottomland areas. The acorn crop is fair on the ridge tops.

The nine-day firearms season will run from Saturday, November 13, through Sunday, November 21.

Management units 1, 4, 7 and 10 will be bucks-only for the entire season.

Units 2 and 3 will be bucks-only November 13-19 and any deer November 20-21.

Units 5, 6 and 12 will be bucks-only for the entire season, with quotas of antlerless deer set for each zone.

The quotas are 2,500 for Unit 5, 1,700 for Unit 9, 1,000 for Unit 6 and 4,500 for Unit 12 (a mistake in the early press releases from the department of Conservation had the Unit 12 quota set at 1,500.

A special permit, obtained by application and a drawing, is needed to take an antlerless deer in a quota zone.

To apply for an antlerless deer permit, send a post card with your name, address, zip code, unit applied for and the serial number from your firearms deer permit to the Wildlife Divison, Missouri Department of Conservation, 2901 North Ten Mile Drive, Jefferson City, Missouri 65101.

Applications will be accepted until Friday, October 15. A drawing for permits will be held after that date.

In addition, any one Missouri resident owning a single tract of 80 or more acres of land and one additional member of his immediate household may request antlerless deer permits in those zones.

The request must be accompanied by all of the information above (except farmers hunting on their own land need not purchase a firearms deer permit), plus a copy of the real property tax receipt.

There are three basic methods of hunting deer--stand hunting (sitting 'em out), still hunting (easing along or stalking) and driving (a large noisy group chasing the deer to waiting standers).

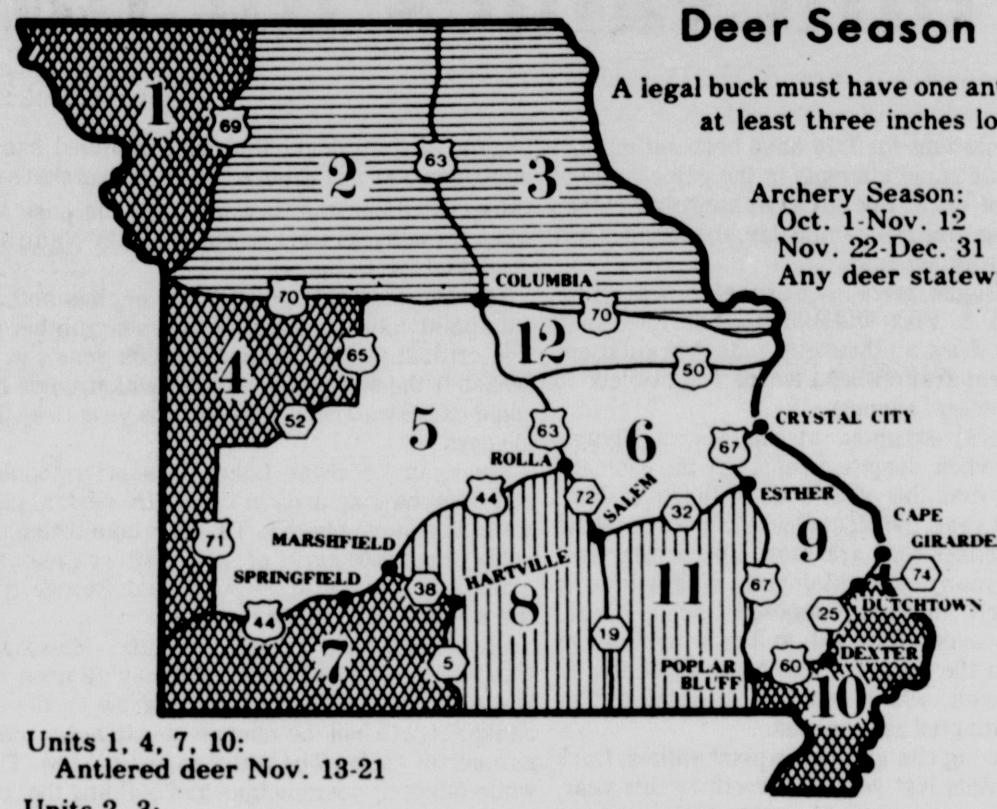

If the woods stay dry and therefore very noisy, still hunting will be difficult. Driving usually results in running shots at the deer, which are hard to hit, and it can be dangerous.

Somewhere between 90 and 95 per cent of all deer in Missouri are taken from stands. Tree stands are legal, but if you climb a tree, care must be taken not to fall and in the handling of firearms.

Archery turkey hunting provides challenge

Missouri bowhunters have a month-long try at bagging an elusive wild turkey.

The fall archery turkey season runs through Oct. 31.

Most archers are content to frustrate themselves by trying to bag a wiley white-tail deer with their limited-range weapons. To take a smaller, sharper-eyed and much more wary turkey seems to be almost an impossibility.

Yet, in 1975 a total of 52 big birds were felled by arrows. A total of 1,568 archers purchased the necessary fall turkey permit.

John B. Lewis, the Missouri Department of Conservation's foremost turkey expert, predicts hunters will be seeing plenty of turkeys this fall.

However, they may find hunting a bit tougher than last year because the birds are older and smarter.

The average adult hen produced 3.5 poults in 1975 and only 2.9 poults in 1976. Lewis speculated that early spring weather started the hens nesting, but late spring frosts and cold caused a high mortality in the young.

However, he added that for Missouri to maintain a "status quo" on its good turkey population, adult hens need to produce an average of 2.6 poults each.

So, the state has a good turkey population. How do you find them in the fall and then bag one with a bow and arrow?

Depending upon October's weather, Lewis suggests hunting the ridge tops and along the edges of fields. That's where most turkey foods are to be found.

The spring frosts heavily damaged the acorn crops in the bottoms and valleys, but left them along the ridges. Acorns are a favored turkey chow.

He added that the birds now are feeding on the large population of grasshoppers to be found along the edges of fields. The turkeys should stay with the grasshoppers as long as the jumpers are around.

Lewis added that an especially good bet is to hunt near ponds or water holes, particularly in the late evening hours, because of the drought.

Complete camouglage clothing is very important.

While spring gobbler hunting is a game of imitating a love-sick hen to bring a strutting gobbler close, fall hunting is a different ball game.

The most effective calls are those imitating a lost bird or a mother hen trying to collect her scattered brood.

The hen will use an almost continuous series of "clucks" to bring the birds back together. The young use the "lost hen" call, which is a series of seven or eight "yelps" or "caucks" followed by two or three spaced-out "clucks."

Lewis noted that "fall hunting is interesting, because what works on one bird won't work on another."

While spring hunters must take care not to call too much, the fall hunter cannot make that mistake.

In close, the challenge is to raise the bow, draw it and release the arrow without being spotted by the keen-eyed bird. Hunters are on their own on that one.

Quail season set

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — The Missouri quail season has been set with dates and bag limits identical to 1975. The season will open Nov. 10 and run through Jan. 15 with a daily limit of eight and possession limit of 16.

"We're in a drouth year," says Jack Stanford, quail biologist for the Department of Conservation. "But it's an agricultural drouth, not a bird drouth."

Stanford said quail have been spared with extremely high temperatures that, combined with drough, would have a heavy effect on nesting. According to Stanford, quail had a good early nest and a fair August next, somewhat hurt by drouth.

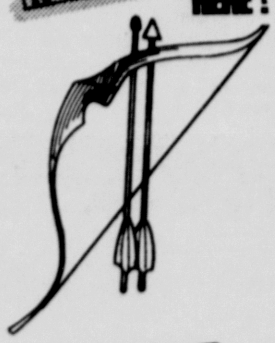

Overall, the production index — a figure which represents the average number of broods seen by observers statewide — is nine, compared to eight in 1975.

Stanford feels that the dry weather tends to keep

People face conservation issue

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri is the hottest conservation story in the country and will be for the next month.

It's a story that won't have a finish until Nov. 2, amid the incredible confusion and dramatics of a Presidential general election.

Missourians will be voting on a state Constitutional amendment to finance an ambitious and inventive conservation program.

"This is the most important conservation happening of our lifetime," said G. Andy Runge, one of the state's four conservation commissioners.

Nov. 2 is the culmination of a decade of thought and planning, a decade that began with a disucssion between two conservationists and will end when each voter indicates whether he or she is willing to pay one eighth of one cent rax on each dollar of purchase.

The money from that fractional tax would be dedicated only to conservation programs and could be used for nothhing else. It would be administered by the Conservation Commission, which itself, was founded by initiative petition in 1936.

"We feel this effort is every bit as important as the original move to pull conservation out of politics," says Ed Stegner, executive secretary of the Citizens Committee for Coservation which collected the 200,000 signatures that put the amendment on the November ballot.

"That was a national first and so is this. Missourians always have been proud of their conservation program. We have a superbly rich outdoor state and we want to keep it that way."

The additional money would meet several prime goals. One is to offset the inroads on the rich outdoors Stegener talked about. Missouri has lost much of its outdoors and the pace is accelerating, not slowing.

In addition, the current conservation budget, limited largely to money collected as permit fees, is nearing the point where expenses will outstrip income and then the present program will begin to decline.

A third goal is to serve the outdoor needs of he people who do not hunt nor fish, but who enjoy conservation areas -- as backpackes, hikers, picknickers, birdwatchers and so forth. Surveys show about 70 per cent of all visitors to conservation areas (state forests, upland wildlife areas, waterfowl areas, etc.) are not hunting or fishing.

In some cases, the percentage is 100. Rockwoods Reservation near St. Louis has a quarter of a million visitors annually and hunting and fishing is not allowed.

"Hunters and fishermen have supported conservation in Missouri for 40 years," says Carl Noren, director of the Conservation Department. "There is no way to overemphasize their contribution. They insisted on an end to woods burning and that led to the return of the forest wildlife.

"They've been uncomplaining and they have supportred professional conservation. They've beaten back political attempts to take over conservation and have been proud with us as Missouri has grown to be, certainly, one of the top several outdoor states in the nation.

"But you can ask only so much of them and we feel that others should help, especially since they use the public outdoor areas so heavily."

The tax, which would amount to a penny on eight dollars of purchase, would bring in about $20 million a year, roughly double the present conservation budget. The annual cost to a wage-earner is estimated about $3-4 or less than what a hunting or fishing permit costs.

There are three major areas where the additional money would go: public lands, services to Missourians, and management and research. The program is called "Design for Conservation." In future articles, we'll look at the three phases of the "Design."

Guns

No gun may be sold to a youngster 16 or under, to a former felon, inmate of a mental institution, drug addict or mentally retarded person, nor can they own a firearm.

And, just as the law thinks that driving and drink don't mix, so does it think guns and drink don't mix. Don't get caught with a gun while intoxicated.

Otherwise, good hunting.

Production indexes in northeast and southeast Missouri had risen from eight to 10. Northwest dropped from nine to seven, west central rose from seven to 11, east central from seven to eight. Southwest dropped from seven to six and the Ozark region from nine to eight.

New state forests would become available to Missourians under an amendment which will appear on the ballot in November. Conservationists say money from a proposed increase in the state sales tax would benefit wildlife and open new sites for nature enjoyment and outdoor recreation.

Missouri voters will find a wildlife conservation proposal on the ballot in November. Backers of the plan are asking for a small increase in the state sales tax to preserve wildlife habitat, fund research and protect unique outdoor areas.

Waterfowl hunters must know their birds before hunting

Know what you're shooting at and have a liberal bag: be unsure and you could be done for the day after one shot.

That's what modern-day duck hunting is all about and 1976 in Missouri and Illinois will be typically modern-day. Both states are on the point system, which means different species and sexes have point evaluations assigned to them.

The bird that brings the hunter's point total equivalent to or puts it over 100 points ends the day's hunt.

Illinois duck hunters will have a straight 50-day duck season, from Oct. 23 to Dec. 11

scaup and all mergansers (except hooded mergansers).

There are two excellent devices to help hunters determine what species of ducks they are seeing or have bagged.

A new book entitled "Top Flight: Speed Index to Waterfowl," by John A. Ruthven and William Zimmerman (Charles Scribner's Sons, $5.95) is excellent. It is narrow enough to carry in a pocket and indexed according to size and color.

The other is a series of pocket-sized plastic impregnated cards called Waterfowl Iden-I-Cards, produced by Barcum House, of Wheaton, Ill. These cards are available for dabbling ducks, diving ducks and geese.

The Missouri goose season will open Oct. 26 and run through Dec. 9. Hunting in the Swan Lake Zone will coincide with that season, but will close when a quota of 25,000 geese are harvested.

The goose season in Missouri's Lower Mississippi River Zone is from Dec. 7 to Jan. 20.

The state-wide Illinois goose season opens Oct. 23 and continues through Dec. 31. Hunting in the Southern Illinois Zone, which includes Alexander, Jackson, Union and Williamson counties, opens Nov. 22 and runs through Jan. 20 or until a quota of 22,000 geese are taken.

Goose limits are complex and hunters should check specific area regulations before hunting.

Missourians will have their first split duck season in history, with the first portion running Oct. 26-Dec. 5 and the second Dec. 2-Jan. 3.

The point evaluations for ducks in both states are:

100 points — Canvasback (and redheads closed along both sides of the Mississippi River from Alton, Ill., northward to the state boundaries).

70 points — Redheads, mallard hens, wood ducks, black ducks and hooded mergansers.

25 points — Mallard drakes, ring-necks, widgeon, buffleheads, goldeneyes, ruddy ducks, oldsquaws and all scoteres.

10 points — Pintails, all teal, gadwall, shovelers,

Hunters to be notified by late October about TVA gun hunt requests

GOLDEN POND, Ky. — Applicants for the fall quota gun hunts for deer at TVA's Land Between The Lakes will be notified if they have been chosen to hunt by late October, according to resource management officials at the 170,000-acre public outdoor area.

The deadline for applying was September 1.

"All applicants will be notified by mail if they were or were not drawn," explained John Mechler, supervisor of wildlife at Land Betwen The Lakes. "We will not accept any type of inquiry -- phone calls, personal inquiries, or letters -- about the drawings until after November 1."

Hunters from throughout the Southeast applied for the hunts to be held in Kentucky November 17, 20, 22, and 29, and in Tennessee November 15, 18, 23, and 27. A special youth hunt will be held in both states November 13.

A total of 28,476 hunters have applied. There will be 7,750 drawn in Kentucky and 4,810 in Tennessee. Selections, areas, and dates are assigned by computer.

A Land Between The Lakes computer card permit is required for each hunter taking part in the gun hunts. Permits must be presented at the time the hunter checks into his or her area.

Each participant in the youth hunt must have all state required licenses and tags, computer card permit, and a Hunter Safety Certificate; these must be presented when checking in for the hunt. EACH youth must be accompanied by an adult who is at least 18 years of age while hunting. EACH adult accompanying a youth in the KENTUCKY hunt is required by state law to have a valid Kentucky hunting license and state deer permit.

Any reason why you should be pleased if the Frisco has a good year?

Our years are good when the economy of our service area is good.

Then we can spend more for goods, resulting in more employment for people all along the line. And that helps keep the economy good.

And we can buy better equipment that lets us improve our efficiency and capability.

That lets us continue to ship in the goods you want and move out the goods you produce at the most economical cost of any form of transportation. And that's good for the economy.

So we profit from a good economy and, in return, that economy profits from us.

Which means when we have a good year, it's a good year where you live.

And that seems a good reason to be pleased.

We're running for you.

Canada geese landing in Missouri are a common sight during the fall, especially at Swan Lake Refuge near Sumner. Goose managers have succeeded in bringing the post-season flock of the birds, which nest on Hudson's Bay, to 200,000 and also raising the quota allowed hunters in the Swan Lake zone to 25,000 birds, a real wildlife management success story. (Department of Conservation photo)

Goose flock now healthy

COLUMBIA— Between the idea and its reality lies 2,000 miles, a blinding Arctic blizzard and seven long years ...

The eastern priairie population of Canada geese, the flock that migrates through Missouri, finally has reached a goal set in 1968 of 200,000 birds after the fall hunting season.

Waterfowl biologists from Manitoba, through Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri; set the goal of an increased flock because of increased hunting pressure.

But no sooner had they made the decision than a terrible late spring blizzard in the spring of 1969 wiped out the year's hatch on Hudson's Bay.

It takes at least three years for such breeding collapse to heal itself and the best way to do it was to ask hunters to tighten their belts, to cut back limits and seasons drastically.

The cutbacks were severe. Minnesota went from a 70-day season to nine days. Missouri's Swan Lake zone quota dropped from 25,000 to 14,000 birds at low ebb.

Last season, for the first time, the quota returned to 25,000. It was a success. The post-season flock topped 200,000.

So hunters at Swan Lake once again will have a 25,000 quota. The season opens October 26. "There's no reason to think we'll drop below 200,000 after the season this year either," says Ken Babcock, waterfowl biologist for the Department of Conservation.

Babcock, who spends part of each summer on the bleak Canada goose nesting grounds around Hudson's Bay, says the 1976 nest season was at least average.

"In fact, instead of severe cold weather, the area was plagued with a heat wave just after the birds started to hatch," he says.

"Hudson's Bay had the highest temperatures in Canada. Some blue and snow geese actually suffered gosling mortality from the heat -- maybe because they nest in very high humidity areas. We didn't see any evidence of mortality among the Canada geese."

So an experiment that was derailed by bad weather now is firmly on the track and running smoothly.

And Missouri hunters, who made the sacrifice necessary to get it there, now are picking up the benefits.
